Minnesotan Hit For Campaigning Instead of Serving Party in Congress

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Action in the 1948 Presidential campaign yesterday narrowed briefly to Senator Robert A. Taft's defense of his home grounds against the "meet the people" tactics of Harold E. Stassen.

At Burton, Ohio, Taft told 400 citizens of his own State that Stassen had refused to serve in Congress "only so he could spend the last two years campaigning for President." Taft said the former Minnesota Governor could have "come down to Washington with the rest of the Republicans to help fight the New Deal and what it stood for."

"But," said Taft, "he did it the easy way."

Stassen in New York

In New York, meanwhile, Stassen climbed out of an airplane which had brought him up from a whirlwind assault on Florida and announced he would make a "major campaign" in Ohio. Four days of political conferences faced him in New York before flying to Taft's home State where voters will select Republican presidential delegates in a primary election May 4.

Stassen declined to attempt a prediction of the outcome in Ohio. It was, he said, "too early to tell" but admitted "it's a very important primary."

He was optimistic about his prospects in Florida, forecasting that he would collect a majority of that State's 16 Republican delegates. He was, in fact, generally optimistic.

Stassen said that his supporters had surveyed the field and estimated he would receive 300 votes at the Philadelphia convention. He added that another survey would be made before the May 4 Ohio voting.

Keynoter to Be Selected

Aloof from these affairs, GOP officials were gathering at Philadelphia for a meeting today at which they will decide who will keynote their convention opening there June 21. Walter S. Sallanan of West Virginia, chairman of the arrangements committee, said it had not been agreed who would deliver the keynote address.

But some committee members privately declared the leading candidates to outline party policy were Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Millikin (R., Colo.). It was pointed out, though, than

Tug Rescues 26 As Big Drydock Sinks in Atlantic

Norfolk, Va., April 18 (AP).—Twenty-six crewmen of a drydock, adrift on lifeboats in stormy Atlantic seas since midmorning when their craft broke a towline and sank, were rescued today by the tug Kevin Morgan.

The tug gave its position as 300 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N. C. It said it would head for Norfolk, Southport, N. C., or Morehead City, N. C., depending upon sea conditions.

The crew took to lifeboats when the 450-foot craft, en route to New York from Bermuda, broke its towline to the Moran about 10 a. m. today and began breaking up. The tug immediately put about and commenced rescue operations.

27 Perish in Crash Of New Guinea Plane

Sydney, Australia, April 18 (AP).—Twenty-seven persons were killed today when a New Guinea Air Traders Transport plane crashed on a takeoff from Lae Airstrip in northeast New Guinea.

The Australian government said it had received reports that 24 of the dead were New Guinea natives being flown from Lae to Wau.

Civil Rights Plan Support Held Lacking

The Truman Administration was accused of failing to give full support to its own civil rights program by Elliott Roosevelt last night.

Roosevelt was a surprise speaker at a mass meeting of the Washington Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

He declared bluntly, "I don't think the present Administration is being absolutely frank with the world and us. The Administration has the power to make a start" toward making the civil rights program work.

Roosevelt said, as a first step, the Administration could issue an executive order to "wipe out discrimination in the armed forces."

As a second step, President Truman, who "has a lot of influence in Washington" could "come forward and tell the people of the world Washington is going to be a democratic capital."

Roosevelt said that if the President did this, "I might be willing to backwater on whom I am going to support in the campaign."

Faye Emerson, Roosevelt's actress wife who was a scheduled speaker, preceded her husband on the program marking the conclusion of the chapter's membership drive.

She declared, "We have a sacred responsibility to make democracy work in this country. It is the most important part of any defense pro-

Martyr Held Type of DAR 'Sterner Stuff'

Mildred F. Harnack, Nazi Victim, Is Paid Tribute at Services

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Mildred Fish Harnack, Western High School graduate who was beheaded by the Nazis for resistance to their ideology, yesterday was typified as "the sterner stuff of which Daughters of the American Revolution are made."

In memorial services held in Constitutional Hall yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, DAR president general, eulogized DAR members who had died during the past year. She said they "have left us with those priceless memories which make of the Daughters of the American Revolution a society ever growing the richer because of those who no longer meet with us in the flesh."

Details of Mrs. Harnack's death were made available only during the past year, Mrs. O'Byrne explained. Mrs. Harnack, who attended George Washington University before transferring to the University of Wisconsin, had served as secretary of the DAR chapter in Berlin after her marriage to a German student. The latter was in the United States on a Rockefeller fellowship when they were married. Both man and wife lost their lives as a result of their underground activities.

Of the 2664 members of the DAR who have died during the past year, Mrs. O'Byrne declared:

"Unselfishly they have contributed of their talents and abilities in order that our society may begin anew at the point where they broke hold, but starting a definite distance further on the road to ultimate achievement than would have been the case had they not lived and labored."

It was a day of commemoration for the members of the Daughters of the American Revolution who had assembled here yesterday. Although the full strength of 4000 delegates is not due until some time today, at least a thousand

All Industry Jittery Over Lewis Verdict

Renewal of Strike Hinted if Mine Boss Is Convicted of Contempt Today

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis learns today whether he faces jail or a fine—or is cleared—in a contempt of court action growing out of the Nation-wide soft coal strike.

America's industry, heavy and light, is intensely interested in the judgment, which was delayed four days from the end of the trial. If Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough convicts the United Mine Workers chief—as he did in 1946 on a similar charge—he can assess what punishment he chooses.

That is why industry is nervous.

The men who manage the automobile factories, steel mills, railroads and other industries realize very well that Lewis' 400,000 United Mine Workers have the power to mine, or not mine, the coal it takes to run those enterprises.

150,000 Are Still Out

About 150,000 of the miners have not returned to work, despite a court order. Many have said they first want to see what Goldsborough does today.

Southern coal operators said they had heard reports from the mines that "the strike will be renewed with vigor" if the court decision should "inconvenience Mr. Lewis."

This touchy situation, involving a test of the Taft-Hartley law and a titanic shoving match between a powerful labor leader and the Government, raised some questions that can only be answered by developments.

What Would Happen?

Would his conviction cause a new coal walkout? If so, what would the Government do? And industry? And Congress? And the higher courts to which Lewis presumably would appeal an unfavorable finding?

The contempt trial ended Thursday except for the decision on guilt. Lewis and the union were charged with ignoring a court order requiring them to end the mine stoppage that began March 15.

The order was obtained under the national emergency provision of the Taft-Hartley Act. It was signed April 3. It was served on Lewis on April 5. He let a week pass, until April 12, before telling the miners that a dispute over pensions was settled and they should go back to work.

Frost Damages Fruit Orchards In Nearby States

Severe frost damage to orchards was reported in part of Washington County, Md., yesterday as a result of a Saturday night drop in temperature. In the apple region of Virginia damage was undetermined, but considered light.

In Maryland, the State university's laboratory at Hancock reported "very severe" damage around Oakland with temperatures in low areas of 21 degrees. The laboratory said the apple crops were harder hit than peaches.

In Frederick and Clarke Counties, Virginia, the mercury dipped to 26 degrees in some spots for the fourth consecutive weekend of frost or near-frost in the apple-growing area. The forecast for last night was for temperatures in the upper thirties in the two counties.

Ercolino Triplets Make It 6 In Their 1-Bedroom Apartment

A housing problem had struck Ercolino like a bolt of lightning. Overnight his family of three had doubled.

His wife, Yolanda, 25, wasn't around to help him with his problem. She was in Sibley Hospital—with triplets.

"It's a funny thing," said Ercolino. "We had X-rays taken two week ago. We thought it might be twins. Did I get a surprise? The X-rays showed it was going to be triplets."

The triplets—two boys and a girl—were born Saturday. Their names, weights and time of arrival are: Paul, 3 pounds, 14 ounces, at 1:38 p. m.; Carol Sue, 4 pounds, 11 ounces, 1:46 p. m., and Lawrence, 5 pounds, 2 p. m.

The Ercolinos have one other child, Richard, 4, who figured in the news last December when he and three young playmates found and ate a box of little red pills. The pills were diethl stilbestrol, a synthetic female sex hormone, but none of the children suffered any ill effects.

The father of the triplets, who is assistant plant accountant for Standard Brands, radiated both elation and worry yesterday.

"We got only one bedroom," he said, "only one bedroom . . . and four kids—. Oh, brother!"

Ercolino said he would be extremely grateful to anyone who could help him obtain new living quarters to accommodate his suddenly expanded family.

Further implications arose in Ercolino's mind.

"Bud, can you imagine the expenses! Diapers for three babies . . . three baby carriages . . . three cribs . . . three . . . three."

The father of the triplets hesitated. Clearly, this series of expenses in triplicate was something to stagger even the mind of an accountant.

"Yes sir, someone might even suggest he dispense the traditional cigars three to a customer.

Big Vote Cheers Italy's Anti-Reds; Will Not Fail, Gasperi Tells West; Raid on Arms Depot Driven Off

Opposing Leaders Cast Their Ballots

Communist-Led Former Partisans, Youths Rushed to Assembly Points

By Seymour Freidin

Milan, April 18 (NYHT).—The threat of violence in northern Italy loomed larger tonight as an amphibious attempt to seize a large ammunition dump was repulsed by an army garrison.

Also, heavy vehicular traffic of Communist-led former partisans and youths to assembly points after thty cast their votes was reported.

Reliable government sources, engaged in spotting such activity, said detachments were apparently being assembled as quietly as possible in strategic areas from which they could strike if ordered.

Begin Rolling Early

Trucks and automobiles, it was said, began rolling soon after the polls opened. The men were said to be under leadership of persons who have had experience in handling large groups.

It is known that a sizable group of Cominform agents of Yugoslav, Czechoslovak, Italian, Polish, Russian and Hungarian nationality moved into northern Italy, via Vienna, after the Communist coup in Prague at the end of February. Nearly all have officer rank in the armies of their respective country.

The tranquility prevailing in the large cities of northern Italy was belied by the activity on the roads and by the dawn attempt today to seize the ammunition dump at Sora, 30 miles south of Milan.

A barge believed to have contained about 80 men "under Communist leadership," security officials reported, came upstream in the Ticino River and attempted to surprise the garrison of 20 men under the command of a captain.

Attacked by Two Soldiers

The garrison, however, was warned a few hours before. The unnamed captain had been attacked by two soldiers while on a tour of inspection.

The soldiers tried to disarm the officer but a sergeant and seven men rescued him, placing the two soldiers under arrest.

Sentries opened fire on the barge. Machine-gun fire ripped back at the ammunition dump, but when the defenders showed no signs of capitulating, the barge withdrew upstream.

The captain was seriously wounded. No other casualties were reported.

The bold attempt to capture the ammunition stores was the seventh the Communists are accused of having made in the last two months.

In Milan, Turin and Genoa, mobile police and army units patrolled the streets with machine-guns and rifles in readiness. Police prefectures kept in constant contact with radio cars, which reported all indications of disturbance, however minor.

3000 Iraqi Railway Employes on Strike

Baghdad, Iraq, April 18 (AP).—Approximately 3000 railway workers have been on strike for three days in protest against dismissal of 12 workers for "agitation and strike fomenting."

Demonstrations are being held daily in Baghdad and many other Iraqi cities, generally under pro-Communist slogans. More than 100 pro-Communists have been arrested in the last two days.

Atmosphere Solemn

Rome, April 18 (AP).—Italians swarmed to strongly guarded polls today, encouraging anti-Communist leaders by their heavy vote.

"We will not fail democracy," Premier Alcide de Gasperi declared expressing the confidence felt by government leaders.

[Palmiro Togliatti, Communist Party leader, appealed to rival parties to let the Communists enter the government even if they fail to win the elections by themselves. He warned that unless "democratic forces" unit there will be "sad days ahead for our country." The statement disclosed Togliatti's apparent conviction that he will not win, the New York Herald Tribune said.]

Some supporters of the Vatican-backed Christian Democrat Party had feared that showers might keep their followers at home, while Communists, under orders, flocked to the polls. But these fears seemed groundless—in some precincts up to 90 per cent of the voters cast ballots within a few hours. The voting for members of Parliament will end Monday afternoon.

The weather was cloudy over most of the peniusula, rain fell in some places and the threat of rain prevailed in others.

Little Need for Soldiers

Up to tonight there had been little need of the 330,000 soldiers, policemen and guards mobilized by the government to insure order among the 29 million voters. At Frascati the guards minded babies while mothers voted.

Two unsuccessful attempts to attack munitions dumps were reported early today. An unofficial but reliable source said an attempt was made to blow up an army dump at Pavia near Milan. The source said the plot was thwarted and two sentries arrested when a small boat was seen maneuvering in the river near the dump.

At San Rocco el Porto, also near Milan, 60 young soldiers guarding a munitions dump were reported to have engaged in a two-hour gunfight with unknown attackers who were driven off.

[Genoa police suddenly took possession of the Ansaldo Marine Motor oWrks, the New York Herald Tribune said. They said they had found a "huge deposit" of weapons there. Rome newspapers learned that agents of Premier de Gasperi in Brescia have warned citizens that a clandestnne radio will broadcast a false report the Communists have won the elections. Government agents said the report would be a signal for the seizure of factories by workers.]

A solemn atmosphere reflected the importance of the election outcome. Millions of Italians got up early to line up before the 41,647 voting places and mark their choice between the Communist-dominated Popular Front and the anti-Communist parties, paced by de Gasperi's Christian Democrats.

The new Parliament being selected is the first one for the Italian republic. Its Senate and Chamber of Deputies will name a President who in turn will select a Premier. The Communists have no representation in the present cabinet.

The verdict of the ballots is expected by late Tuesday, when the Senate Nears Long-Range Housing Vote

Taft Predicts His Version of Disputed Program Will Pass

The Senate is scheduled to vote today or Tuesday on the hotly disputed long-range T-E-W national housing program.

Before he left for a campaign swing in Ohio, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) flatly predicted the Senate would pass his version of the housing measure.

The Senate last Thursday adopted some 14 amendments proposed by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.). Taft made no objection since the amendments will go out the window if the Senate adopts his bill and proposed amendments.

The Senate's housing tussle has developed into a scrap between Taft and McCarthy, a strong supporter of Presidential Candidate Harold E. Stassen.

Among Major Provisions

Some of the major provisions of the measure sponsored by Senators Taft, Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) and Robert Wagner (D., N. Y.) are:

1. Increase of Title VI FHA insurance authorization by $1,600,000,000 with one year's extension of Title VI. At least half of the additional amount is allocated for rental housing. Cost limitation is changed from $1800 a room to $8100 per family dwelling unit.

2. To facilitate Government sale of the Greenbelt towns, FHA insurance is authorized in connection with the sale of any of these properties either in part or as a whole. This includes Greenbelt, Md., as well as Greenhills, Ohio, and Greendale, Wis.

3. FHA Title I insurance auth-

Party Line Split Over Air Power

GEORGIA'S VINSON, long-time friend of the Navy in the House, switches allegiance to air power. Page 4.

By The Associated Press

A tense Senate dispute over voting extra billions to build up America's fighting air power yesterday cut sharply across political party lines.

Two key Republican Senators—Chairman Bridges (N. H.) of the Appropriations Committee and Chairman Gurney (S. Dak.) of the Armed Services Committee — are lined up firmly behind President Truman and Defense Secretary Forrestal.

They told a reporter in separate interviews they see no reason to rush Senate approval of funds for 70 combat air groups until an overall defense program including draft and universal military training is ready.

Mr. Truman and his Defense Secretary are clinging to their original estimates that a 55-group Air Force is enough at this time if backed up by draft and UMT.

On the other side of the argument are two Democrat—Senators O'Mahoney (Wyo.) and Maybank (S. C.).

O'Mahoney told reporters he will vote for the 70-air group plan. And he also took a dig at the Republicans for insisting on a tax cut. O'Mahoney said they now face a probability of red ink spending to meet armed services costs.

Maybank, a member of the Armed Service Committee, bluntly promised a fight against any de-

Russia Ends Road Blocks For Few Hours

Action Lasts but Short While and Check Points Are Quickly Restored

Vienna, April 18 (AP).—Russian authorities removed armed guards from road blocks on British and American-traveled highways for a few hours today.

The guards were restored tonight, however, on the two highways involved. The blocks are on the Danube River road to the United States air base at Tulln and on the highway leading to the British airport at Schwechat.

This was the first day since the Russians established the check point on the river road last Thursday that Americans could pass the barrier without showing gray identification cards issued by the four occupying powers.

Before the Russians restored guards to the Schwechat road block tonight, a British spokesman said "it is a clear-cut victory for our firm policy."

General Gives Russians Apology For GIs' Insults

Frankfurt, Germany, April 18 (AP).—An American general apologized today for the alleged insulting conduct of two United States soldiers toward officers of the Russian restitution mission.

The soldiers were identified as Corp. Robert Osolinski, 19, of Perth Amboy, N. J., and Pfc. John R. Murphy, 20, of Indianapolis.

The Russian officers, Majs. Vasili Ignatziev and Nikolai Galkin, said Osolinski cursed them last night and tried to pick a fight. He followed them home and threw a rock through their window. Then both Osolinski and Murphy entered the officers' billets and "were profane and abusive"

Maj. Gen. Miller G. White, chief of staff of United States forces in Europe, called on the Russian officers today to apologize.

Power of Penicillin Increased By Adding Cobalt Chloride

Dangerous Water Turns Babies Blue

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

Chicago, April 18.—Drinks of water that turn babies blue, sometimes killing them, were described tonight to the American Chemical Society.

This water, taken from some wells, is crystal clear and looks innocent. But even small amounts, as a straight water drink or in milk formulas, can make babies start turning blue.

It does this because it contains too much nitrogen, in a form of nitrate that affects the babies' blood. Their blood hemoglobin is altered so it doesn't carry oxygen as it should. The blood becomes a chocolate color and the skin turns bluish or slaty-gray.

The blue disease, or cyanosis, from water was first discovered in Iowa.

Tonight James G. Weart, of the Illinois Department of Public Health, reported this water is fairly widespread, particularly in shallow wells of the Midwest. He urged health officials to check all wells carefully.

In Illinois alone last year, he said, at least 33 babies got the disease from water, and five of them died.

The water apparently is bad only for very young babies.

Experiments Made At California U.

By the United Press

The American Pharmaceutical Association yesterday reported evidence that the germ-killing powers of penicillin may be doubled or even quadrupled by mixing the wonder drug with tiny amounts of the common chemical, cobalt chloride.

(Cobalt chloride is the ruby-red chemical used in most barometers and invisible inks. It has little effect on germs by itself.)

The association said the "unusual enhancement" of penicillin's power was discovered by scientists at the University of California College of Pharmacy. The story of their test-tube experiments is told in an article in the forthcoming issue of the association's journal.

Drs. Louis A. Strait, Jean Dufrenoy and Robertson Pratt, with the laboratory assistance of Virginia Lamb, conducted the experiments.

The researchers have no certain explanation of the phenomenon they say they discovered. They suggest tentatively that the cobalt may stimulate the bacteria, thus setting the germs up for penicillin to strike down.

"The sensitization of the bacteria by suitably low concentrations of cobalt," said the article, "tends to place the organisms in a physiological condition in which they are more readily susceptible to the action of penicillin."

Crowded and Exclamatory

Sunday at National Gallery Like a Basement Bargain Day

It was like bargain day in Macy's basement—the National Gallery of Art yesterday.

Everything was "pretty"—provided it wasn't "cute"—and you had to shove your way through the crowds just like on a shopping tour.

Everyone liked what they saw and said so—the dowagers, the housewives, the little girls with all-day suckers, the high school freshmen and even the guards.

And they played no favorites. Titian, Raphael, Kalf, Rembrandt—they all drew the same compliments. Or maybe, "Isn't that n—i—c—e" or "that's so-o-o lovely, isn't it?"

And much like carnival barkers, the guards would shout at the crowds:

"Keep moving. . . . Yowsa, we're open until 10 tonight . . . Take a peak today and come in tomorrow to see the whole show. . . ."

That's what most everyone did. They peeked.

They stopped to look at Rubens' famous portrait of "Isabella Brandt," pausing only long enough "Rubens . . . well, well, well.

"This is so cute. . . .

"My, but that's nice. . . ."

They tossed off Frans Hals' "The Wich of Haarlem" with "What's this fresh-looking thing?"

One elderly lady, stopping to look at Rembrandt's "Old Man with the Red Cap," remarked:

"He looks so like an old man, doesn't he?"

Another loquacious little woman, who's visited the gallery "many, many times," particularly admired a "picture of the nativity but I can't remember the painter's name because it was so long."

Of Daumier's "Don Quixote," a little boy said:

"Boy, that's really something. Look at that horse."

And Botticelli's "Simonetta Vespucci" gave one attractive young woman the idea for a "wondeful new hairdress."

The 202 masterpieces will be on exhibition through this week. The showing was originally set to end yesterday.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, DAR Head, Considered First-Class Campaigner

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution who led memorial services for a Nazi-slain DRA member here yesterday, is a first rate campaigner.

She entered the DAR presidential race last year at the last moment and won. She didn't make a single campaign speech across the country.

But she made herself recognized at all functions during the DAR's five-day fifty-sixth Continental Congress here last May.

During the Congress she wore the same daytime dress every day, the same dusty rose dinner gown every evening.

"It's good campaign technique," she explained.

After her election, Mrs. O'Byrne said she never had aspired to the DAR presidency, but only agreed to run when her lifelong friend, Mrs. John Logan Marshall of Clemson, S. C., a candidate for the presidency, died about a month before the election after making a campaign speech in Philadelphia.

Blue-eyed and a trim-figured 125 pounds, her 5-fot-3 stature topped by well-groomed silvery hair, Mrs. O'Byrne was an important figure in national DAR executive sessions before her election.

Her companions affectionately dubbed her "Comfy Soul" and "Sphinx."

The "Sphinx" nickname was given her by a close friend, Mrs. Julian Young Talmadge, who was succeeded as president-general of the DAR by Mrs. O'Byrne.

According to Mrs. Talmadge at executive sessions Mrs. O'Byrne would maintain a strict poker face while an issue was being discussed. After the others had aired their vitws, Mrs. O'Byrne would quietly state hers. Only rarely was she on the minority side.

Mrs. O'Byrne taught English and science after her graduation from Indiana University. She lives in Brookville, Ind.

Her husband is a practicing attorney in Brookville. They have no children.

Before her elevation to the presidency, Mrs. O'Byrne was registrar general of the DAR. She will continue as president-general for two more years.

delegates filed into Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon to hear solemn tribute paid their departed members who had "entered into life victorious" since last April.

After hour-long ceremonies in the hall, the members grouped around the Founders' Memorial Monument in the garden of Memorial Continental Hall. There they paid tribute to the four founders, Miss Mary Dasha, Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, Mrs. Ellen Walworth and Miss Eugenia Washington.

"That organization promises little which fails to recognize with appropriate gratitude and regularity those true pioneers of the earlier day, who brought it into being," the president-general said.

Officers Eulogized

Among officers of the DAR who had died during the past year, and who were eulogized in the memorial service were Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, who first held office as State vice regent of the District of Columbia (1906-1907) and served as honorary vice president general from 1935-1947.

Other District DAR leaders included Janet Elizabeth Hosmer Richards, one-time writer for The Washington Post, who later pioneered in the lecture field, and Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger, who served as organizing secretary-general from 1920 to 1923 in the organization.

After adjournment of services in the hall, the day of commemoration took on a more national aspect. The DAR delegates journeyed by car and bus to Arlington Cemetery. Speaking at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Mrs. O'Byrne gave some inkling of the theme, "A Strong America," which will govern activities of the congress.

"The inhabitant of this final resting place emphasizes the transitory nature of this mortal life and the infinite reaches of eternity. When we contemplate the single completeness of his contribution, the impersonal and yet all-inclusive charter of this recognition of him, our own finite possibilities appear rather dwarfed and doubtful. But we can rededicate ourselves to that cause for which he and his comrades gave their last full measure of devotion. We can here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain. To do less would be the rankest of injustices."

Lastly, at the tomb of George and Martha Washington at Mount Vernon, the DAR ended the commemorative day as Mrs. O'Byrne praised the gift of the Washingtonians "to succeeding generations" and declared it a privilege to "pause a while, at this hallowed post spot, and to contemplate what has been, and to strive to determine what will be as we travel further down the trail."

Tonight at 8:30, Mrs. O'Byrne will bring the Fify-seventh Continental Congress to order and sound the defense keynote, which is expected to dominate convention proceedings. Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) will deliver the principal address tonight. Even before the formal convocation, however, delegates will settle down to the work of committees, which are to present 103 reports to the Congress before it adjourns Friday night.

ECA Lines Up Ships to Send Italy Supplies

By the United Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday lined up shipping space to send to Italy $11,238,000 of urgently needed food and fuel.

Timing his action with Italy's crucial elections, Administrator Paul G. Hoffman Saturday authorized new shipments of coal, wheat flour, soya flour and rolled oats valued at $8,102,000. This new order was put through only two days after Hoffman authorized shipment to Italy of 28,000 long tons of wheat valued at $3,130,000.

The big obstacle to getting the supplies to Italy is ships, an ECA spokesman said. Vessels are available but they must be spotted at ports where the supplies can be loaded.

Hoffman, at his most recent news conference, told a questioner that he was unable to say when the first shipload of food would sail, but he indicated it would be soon. However, he stressed that so far as ECA is concerned, "our job is recovery," not politics.

Moving to aid the five European nations on the "urgent" United States aid list, Hoffman already has authorized $58,301,000 worth of foods, fuels and other commodities for Austria, France, Greece, Italy and the Netherlands. In addition, France, Italy and Holland already have benefited by two authorizations.

France is the ranking nation to date on the earmarking of urgent foods and other commodities. In fact, vessels destined for France and the Netherlands already have left Texas ports with precious, though small, cargoes of wheat.

Pravda Describes Hoffman as Dictator

London, April 18 (U.P.).—Pravda Columnist Yuri Zhukov today described the director of the European Recovery Program, Paul Hoffman, as a "dictator" who has been assigned to "establish the American order in Europe."

Zhukov comment in the Communist Party newspaper, broadcast by Moscow radio, quoted literally from American publications to show how Hoffman allegedly will control the economic destinies of countries taking part in the Marshall Plan.

List of Lobbyists Jumps Since Jury Began Its Probe

By The Associated Press

The Justice Department yesterday reported a big jump in lobbying registrations since a grand jury here started looking into the situation.

Irving R. Kaufman, special assistant to Attorney General Clark, said 190 "new lobbyists" registered with the House and Senate during the first quarter of this year.

He noted this was about four times as many as registered during the quarter preceding the Justice Department's calling for a grand jury look into compliance with the Lobbying Act. The first quarter total was also about twice the combined registrations for the third and fourth quarters of 1947.

Lord Rothermere, publisher of the London Daily Mail, Evening News, Sunday Dispatch and other British newspapers, will speak at the AP centennial luncheon in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The ANPA will have a closed all-day session Tuesday devoted to free-for-all discussion of almost 100 topics relating to all phases of the newspaper business. General open sessions will begin Wednesday with an address by David W. Howe of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, ANPA president.

Heavy Voting Encourages Anti-Communists in Italy

electoral office has promised to report returns for the Chamber of Deputies. Senate returns are expected Monday evening.

The world will know then if Italy has decided upon a Communist government and all the implications that choice entails. The United States, which has poured two billion dollars into Italy for food and supplies since the war, has warned that a Communist victory may mean Italy's exodus from the European Recovery Program.

If the Communists get around a third of the vote, as some Washington officials think, they will still be in a position to demand a part in the new government.

De Gasperi voted, then asked the world to "have confidence in the Italian people at this historic moment—we are strong enough to defend democracy."

In obvious reference to America's interest in the election he said:

"We know the American people are with us this day. We feel deeply in our hearts their goodness and generosity."

Togliatti, leader of the Italian Communist party—biggest in Europe outside Russia—voted in a primary school near the Chamber of Deputies.

Vice Premier Guiseppe Saragat, leader of the anti-Communist Socialists, summed up the situation just before he voted:

"Today and tomorrow we shall decide whether Italy will be part of western Europe or the Balkans."

The Ministry of Interior issued a communique warning poll residents to hand open ballots to the voters after being certain there were no unofficial marks on them.

Officails said some voters in Rome and Bologna, who were handed folded ballots, found they had already been marked in favor of the Communist Popular Front.

A voter who did not notice such a mark or smudge, however faint, and went on to mark the symbol of another party, would probably have his ballot disqualified.

Very high voting percentages were reported from official and unofficial sources. In Venice 70 per cent had voted by 5 p. m. In some of Turin's industrial precincts 90 per cent had voted. In the anti-Communist center of the town the percentage at 5 p. m. was around 70.

Both Naples and Bari in the south had heavy morning balloting. At Taranto the voting was so heavy despite rain that local officials predicted a 95 per cent franchise.

Upper and middle class families on ancient Aventine Hill in Rome had turned out 75 per cent strong by midafternoon. This was matched in pro-Communist Ponte Milvio district where 60 per cent voted three hours after the polls opened.

Everywhere ambulances carried the sick and injured to voting places. Polling places were set up in hospitals for those who could not go out.

Throughout Italy, cities and towns reported heavy police guards on the street. Radio-directed tanks, armored cars and jeeps loaded with riot police moved about, constantly keeping Scelba's promise of sharp vigilance against any attempt at intimidation.

In Turin, police kept all electioneering more than 600 feet from the polls. They arrested two Popular Front youths who stepped across the line carrying manifestos, but released them with orders to remove party armbands in obedience to laws against wearing party uniforms.

'Hour of Conscience'

The turnout of priests, monks and nuns was heavy. Pope Pius XII had called the election "the great hour of Christian conscience." The church has waged a vigorous anti-Communist campaign.

The Pope himself could not vote. He and his cardinals and prelates of the Vatican curia are citizens of the Vatican state. But he wound up his morning round of audiences early so Vatican employes having Italian citizenship could get away.

All eligible men and women 21 years or over could vote for the Chamber of Deputies, while those 25 or over could vote for the Senate.

The Senate will have 237 members, elected for six years. In order to win a candidate needs 65 per cent of the vote in his district, or "college." If no one gets that many votes—not many do—the votes are juggled around until enough Senators are chosen. Candidates must be 40 years old.

The president of the republic is empowered for this election to nominate an additional 114 Senators on the basis of their services to the nation, anti-Fascist records or other merits. He also has the constitutional right to name not more than five other Senators as outstanding representatives of Italian culture in the fields of science, art, literature and the social sciences. Thus the Senate may have up to 356 members.

Zacharias Blames U. S. For Revolt

Faulty intelligence, a negative approach to the Bogota Conference by the United States, and improper evaluation of the Latin American situation were blamed yesterday for the Bogota revolt.

Admiral Ellis M. Zacharias, author of "Secret Missions" and a wartime director of Naval Intelligence, speaking on Ed Hart's radio program, "Is Congress Doing Its Job?", declared:

"It appears that there was a lack of information made available by our intelligence agencies to those in the higher echelons of our State Department, whose duty it is to formulate our foreign policy. It is perfectly obvious that our intelligence was faulty. The events which transpired at Bogota prove it. The greatest fault, I believe, was a lack of appreciation of the scope and importance of the psychological factors involved."

Admiral Zacharias pointed out that while "our State Department has officially set as its goal for the Bogota Conference the creation of a common inter-American program against communism," the Latin American countries, "badly run down and with a low standard of living, set their conference goal as an inter-American economic cooperation and recovery program."

Pointing out that previous reports had indicated this situation, Admiral Zacharias said a "proper over-all evaluation" was not made of these reports—"the specific job of the Central Intelligence Agency."

Such an evaluation, had it been made, would have changed Secretary Marshall's plans for the conference, Zacharias said. He said he believed the shooting of Gaitan was a signal for general disorder.

Asked by Hart whether he blamed the Communists for the disorder, Zacharias said, "I believe that their activities were a Moscow-inspired move to embarrass us as much as possible. However, there are only 8000 Communists in all of Colombia, a nation of 10 million people. Rioting and revolution could hardly have occurred on the scale that they did if the violence had been a strictly Communist show. The Communists, as always, took advantage of the misery of the people."

The former Naval Intelligence chief said lack of adequate funds for United States intelligence and failure to recognize the importance of psychological action were at the root of the Nation's intelligence problem.

Committees Rush To Complete Work Of Americas Parley

Bogota, Colombia, April 18 (U.P.).—Churchgoing crowds scurried for cover today as snipers and Colombian troops exchanged shots in the square.

So far as was known, no casualties resulted. The city was quiet again before noon.

[The New York Herald Tribune said five soldiers and seven civilians were killed in today's shooting"]

Subcommittees of the Ninth Pan-American Conference's steering committee were in session throughout the day in an effort to rush the work of the hemisphere meeting to completion.

Conference in Recess

Except for the steering subcommittees, the conference was in recess today. The steering committee—the chief delegates of the 21 American nations—will remain in continuous session from 11:30 a. m. tomorrow until its work is completed.

The last item on the steering committee agenda is an anti-Communist resolution—which may have to be watered down because of the tense political situation in Colombia.

The Liberal Party, which has already compelled the Conservatives to abandon plans for breaking relations with Russia, may oppose adoption of a strong anti-Communist stand by the conference.

United States Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman, speaking yesterday before the economic affairs committee, warned Latin American nations that they must create the "right climate" for private investors if they expect aid from the United States.

Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Uruguay and Peru joined in opposition to Harriman's stand, arguing that Latin American countries need protection against foreign investors.

New Colombian Developments

Three new developments in the Colombian political situation made it appear today the conference could be ended in 10 days at the most.

These developments were:

1. The Liberal and Conservative parties concluded a "political truce" of indefinite length, pledging both parties to work together for the moral and physical rebuilding of their riot-torn country.

2. Mrs. Amparo Jarmaillo de Gaitan, widow of assassinated Liberal Leader Jorge Elieger Gaitan, consented to the burial of her husband's remains, without forcing President Mariano Ospina Perez to resign before the funeral.

3. Mrs. Gaitan agreed to the burial of Gaitan in his home, eliminating a state funeral at the battered capitol, which might renew rioting.

Truman Asks Atom Commission Members to Serve New Terms

President Truman has asked the five members of the United States Atomic Energy Commission to accept renomination and probably will send their names to the Senate this wek for appoitment to new terms beginning August 1, it was learned yesterday.

Under the terms of the Atomic Energy Act, nominees for membership on the commission beginning August 1 are to have staggered terms. The nominations will run from one to five years, so that one vacancy on the commission will occur each year.

The President will determine the length of the new term to which each commission member will be appointed, subject to Senate confirmation. However, it is understood that the commission has indicated its preferences, with the commission in some instances overruling the personal desires of some of its members for the short-term appointments.

David E. Lilienthal, the chairman, is understood to have expressed a desire to his fellow commissioners that his renomination be for only one year. However, his fellow commissioners are said to have overruled him in their memorandum to the White House. They are said to have compromised on an informal recommendation that Lilienthal be renominated for three years, half-way between the shortest and the longest of the new terms.

Dr. Robert F. Bacher, the nuclear physicist on the commission, similarly wished only a one-year reappointment if he was to be renamed at all, according to sources close to the commission. His fellow commissioners, however, felt that his talents were needed and prevailed upon him to accept at least a two-year appointment if it is profferred.

With none of the commissioners eager to continue the difficult and exacting work any longer than patriotic service to their country requires, and with some anxious to get back to their non-governmental pursuits, they are reported to have agreed to accept renominations as follows: William W. Waymack, one year; Dr. Bacher, two years; Lilienthal, three years; Sumber T. Pike, four years, and Lewis L. Strauss, five years.

However, the final determination as toeach renomination and the length of the term rests with the President, who may overrule the commission's proposals.

Figueres States Terms to End Civil War in Costa Rica

New York, April 18 (AP).—Rebel leader Jose Figueres today said Costa Rica's civil war would be continued unless his terms for a peace were respected immediately.

Figueres made the statement in a telephone interview from Cartago, Costa Rica. Figueres claims to control the entire east coast of the country and to have troops within eight miles of San Jose, the capital.

Fighting has been suspended to permit peace negotiations. Figueres said his emissary, Father Benjamin Nunez, went to San Jose today but he had no word of the outcome.

The ghting started March 12 after a government-controlled congress annulled th eelection of Otilio Ulate to the presidency on grounds of fraud. Figueres is a Ulate supporter.

The rebel leader said an agreement had been reached five days ago for surrender of the San Jose government, but that Communists refused to lay down their arms.

President Picado's group is willing to surrendeer, he said. The group headed by Rafael Calderon Guardia, defeated presidential candidate, "is trying to get better terms under threat of a military invasion by military forces of Dictator Somoza (former President and now Minister of War Juan) Anastasio Somoza of Nicaragua," he said.

Figueres said "Communists are fortifying the better buildings" in San Jose. He added that prominent citizens of San Jose "are being taken to those fortified buildings as hostages in an attempt to keep us from firing against them."

Chile, Ecuador Reported Next Red Targets

The State Department has received reports, not yet verified, that Communists or Communist-backed groups may try to seize power in Chile and Ecuador within the next few weeks, it was disclosed yesterday.

A department source made it clear that the reports lack official verification. But one of them tends to support official announcements by the Chilean government that the Communists there plan an uprising May 1, envisaging the kidnaping of President Gonzales and other government and army leaders.

The report on Ecuador said the "Conservatives," with the help of Communists, were going to try and seize power about June 1.

Dispatches from Latin America during the past week told similar stories of expected Communist activities. And Gen. Rene Picado, Costa Rican security minister, said in Mexico City that Communists planned new uprisings in Chile, Venezuela and Jamaica in the near future.

Government officials in Brazil have blamed international Communist conspirators for explosions that destroyed a large part of the Deodoro military base in Rio de Janeiro last Thursday.

Fight for Air Power Directed by Vinson

Defense-Minded Representative Tells Why He Shifted Emphasis From Sea Strength

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Thursday's overwhelming victory for air power in the House was no accident. Behind-the-scenes manager of the anti-Administration coup was a veteran leader of many a fight for bigger defense forces.

But what made old-time members and correspondents rub their eyes was the fact that it was "Admiral" Carl Vinson — long the congressional champion of the Navy—who was fighting for the Air Force as America's major security prop.

The man who had been "Mr. Navy" to Congress for many years—who probably more than anyone had been responsible for first, the "two-ocean Navy" and then the "five-ocean Navy"—was backing air power over sea power.

From Bridge to Cockpit

The admiral had stepped down from the bridge, stepped into the cockpit and taken flight, said congressional wits.

For 16 years—from the Democratic capture of the House in 1931 until the GOP regained control 15 months ago—Carl Vinson was chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee. As such he became a powerful figure in naval circles.

The "swamp fox"—as he was affectionaately but irreverently known—skillfully piloted the Navy's shipbuilding, personnel and other bills through the Capitol Hill maze. No admiral nor Secretary of the Navy can claim to have had as much to do with the shaping of American sea power during this period.

His Own Explanation

What made this 64-year-old Navy backer become a leader of the air power fight during his thirty-first year in Congress. Here's his own explanation given on the floor:

"In the past the enemy forces with which we were concerned were land and sea forces and the force in being upon which we relied was the United States Navy.

"Being a continental power with broad oceans separating us from the brawlings of Europe on the one side and the brawlings of Asia on the other, we were bound to maintain and did maintain sea power . . .

"That situation has now changed . . . On the seas, we have the greatest Navy in the world, a greater Navy than all the rest of the naval forces of the world put together. We can and must maintain this force in a position of clear superiority.

Capable of Competing

"We must recognize that Russia has not traditionally been a naval power . . . In the air we are capable of competing with the Russians and they are capable of competing with us . . .

"As I have studied the military situation of this country, I am driven again and again to the conclusion . . . that we will be gambling with our national existence if we do not provide the funds for a great air force."

Representative Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.), another "Navy man" who played a prominent role in the thumping 343-to-3 victory for a 70-group air force, has a logical explanation for Vinson's "conversion." Says Johnson, a wartime Navy lieutenant commander and House Naval Committeeman:

"Vinson long ago saw Hitler and Hirohito coming and built a Navy to whip them. Now he sees the danger of Stalin and backs an air force—the thing that will beat him."

50 Reds Are Reported Slain in Burma Battle

Honors for 78

Inverchapel To Decorate U. S. Officers

By The Associated Press

Lord Inverchapel, British Ambassador to the United States, will present decorations to 78 members of the American armed forces Tuesday in an embassy ceremony.

Inverchapel

Honorary Knight Commander of the Military Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, Vice Admiral Patrick Nelson Lynch Bellinger, USN, Earlhurst, Alleghany, Va.

Honorary Companion of the Military Division of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath: Maj. Gen. Henry S. Aurand, USA (now lieutenant general), Fort Myer, Va.; Maj. Gen. David Norvell Walker Grant, USAAF, Virginia Beach, Va.; Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, USAAF, Gunston rd., Alexandria, Va.; Brig. Gen. Morris W. Gilland, USA (now colonel), the Engineer Center, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Navy Tests Torpedo Model

Pasadena, Calif., April 18 (AP).—A tiny torpedo, no bigger than a child's arm, poises briefly on the ramp of a twentieth-century crossbow and then hurtles forward into a glass-sided tank of water.

Its progress is recorded electrically by cameras capable of taking thousands of pictures a second. Upon its behavior in the tank will depend the design of America's new, top-secret underwater weapons, and possibly even the design of tomorrow's civilization.

The scene is a small scientific laboratory, operated by the Pasadena underwater division of the vast naval ordnance test station headquartered at Inyokern, Calif. For years the very existence of this laboratory has been secret. Here physicists and engineers are rectifying the mistakes of the last two wars, and finding out what makes a torpedo zig when it should zag.

Officially the laboratory exists to develop new sizes and shapes of underwater missiles for the Navy's torpedo testing range in the mountains north of near-by Azusa, Calif. If the behavior of a new design turns out to be predictable in the laboratory, it is tested on a larger scale at the Azusa range. No experimenting with war heads or propellants is done here, however; that is done at Inyokern.

Under construction is another 300-foot compressed-air tube, one end of which rests on pontoons in the water, which can vary the angle at which the torpedo enters the lake. This will be the only known facility of its type in the world.

Magidoff Declares Spy Charge Trumped Up for Propaganda

Berlin, April 18 (AP).—Robert Magidoff, American correspondent expelled from Russia on spy charges, said today the accusation was "trumped up by the Russians for internal propaganda purposes."

Magidoff and his wife arrived here from Moscow today. Their baggage and even the linings of their clothes were closely inspected by agents who saw them off in Russia.

Magidoff, Russian born, had been a Moscow correspondent 12 years. He was accused of espionage in a letter over the name of his secretary, Miss Cecilia Nelson, which appeared in the Moscow newspaper, Izvestia. It alleged that Miss Nelson saw documents in Magidoff's office showing he was "systematically receiving from the United States espionage assignments in the U. S. S. R."

Magidoff said he was "absolutely convinced Miss Nelson did not write that letter, but that it was written for her."

Magidoff asserted Miss Nelson was born of Finnish parents in the United States, and went to Russia with them in the early '30s. She and her father adopted Soviet citizenship years ago, and she is married to a Finn known in Moscow as "the best trumpet player in town," the correspondent said.

In Moscow Magidoff represented National Broadcasting Co., McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., and the British Exchange Telegraph Agency. The Nelson charges sought to ineriminate Magidoff because of communications he had received from McGraw-Hill.

These, Magidoff said, were routine matters which went to the company's correspondents all over the world.

Magidoff said he felt the false accusations against him were part of a Russian campaign to discredit foreigners, especially Americans, in the Soviet Union.

Sokolovsky Orders End of Confiscation Of Industries for State Socialization

Berlin, April 18 (AP).—Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, Soviet military governor, today ordered the states of the Soviet zone of Germany to stop the confiscation of industries for socialization.

With 40 per cent of industrial production in the Russian zone already taken over by the states, Marshal Sokolovsky appeared to be trying to give private ownership and initiative a shot in the arm.

Sokolovsky recently returned from Moscow where he undoubtedly received the latest Soviet line on the coming economic struggle in Europe.

Part of that line appears to be assurance that private industry is not to be absorbed completely, that there is no intention to "Sovietize" eastern Germany completely.

"The talk that private initiative and private ownership in the Soviet occupation zone are oppressed can only be attributed to malevolent and hostile propaganda," said the official newspaper of the Soviet military administration, Taegliche Rundschau.

Although 40 per cent of industrial production in the Soviet zone is now state owned, this actually represents only 8 per cent of the firms, the paper said. Most of those confiscated were the large, important factories operated by "Nazis, war criminals and monopolists."

Committee Meets Today

Gurney has called another closed-door session of the Armed Services group this morning in an attempt to reach some agreement on the "balanced defense plan" which Secretary Forrestal wants.

It calls for 55 air groups, added manpower for the Army and Navy, the temporary draft and UMT. Chances for any quick agreement appeared slight.

Bridges said he will not ask the Senate Appropriations Committee to consider the special Air Force fund bill until Gurney's group has reached its decision. But if Gurney's committee fails to report "within a reasonable time," Bridges said he may ask the Appropriations group to act.

Officer Calm On Fate of 4 Marines Held

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
LIEUT. H. W. HAWKINS
Release requested

Shanghai, China, April 18 (AP), Vice Admiral Oscar E. Badger, commander of United States naval forces in the west Pacific, said today he expects Chinese Communists to reply soon to his request for release of four American Marines captured two weeks ago.

The marines, all airmen, were forced down in Communist territory. It was the third time Communists have captured United States marines in the Tsingtao area.

"I am not concerned about the outcome of the negotiations," Badger said. "We communicated with them regarding the situation of the marines. We expect a communication from them within two or three days. It is a matter of considerable exchange of letters and delays we sometimes cannot understand, but at this time we are not concerned about the ultimate outcome."

The marines being held are Lieut. Harold W. Hawkins, 25, whose wife, Patricia, lives at Tsingtao; Master Sergt. Thomas J. Shaw, 32, son of Henry I. Shaw, Winnfield, La.; Technical Sergt. Robert C. White, 25, brother of Betty Ann White, Northfork, W. Va., and Corpl. Robert R. Lewis, 19, Petersburg, N. Y.

Shantung City Under Heavy Red Attack

Nanking, April 18 (AP).—Heavy fighting was reported around the government city of Weihsien, wartime Jap prison camp for Europeans, in eastern Shantung today, but government dispatches said the garrison was holding firm against Communist onslaughts.

In the National Assembly, Shantung delegates demanded that at least two divisions of infantry and more planes be sent to the defense.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told them this was already being done.

It was estimated that 26 were injured. All natives of Anhwei Province, the students finally were permitted to present a petition demanding dismissal of the provincial governor, dispatch of regular troops to Anhwei to fight the Communists; and special relief for student war refugees.

The Assembly, meanwhile, approved special powers for Chiang to issue emergency security and economic orders without legislative concurrence.

The action approved powers he already wields.

The Assembly is scheduled to elect China's first constitutional President Monday. Chiang is regarded as a certain choice even though he earlier tried to step aside.

It was probable that the inauguration would be set for May 5.

Fleeing Greek Rebels Hide in Caves

Athens, Greece, April 18 (U.P.).—Guerilla forces in central Greece were reported breaking into small groups today, and taking refuge in railroad tunnels and caves to escape government troops pushing forward in their biggest offensive to date.

Officials were silent on the extent of the new attack, but press dispatches indicated the principal engagement was under way in the area west of Lamia, in east-central Greece.

Clashes were reported near the villages of Krikelon and Merkada on Tymfristos mountain, and at Neohorion. Tymfristos is about 30 miles west of Lamia.

Minor activity was reported in other sectors.

A Continuing Threat

In his address to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, President Truman declared that the 10-point anti-inflation program he presented to Congress last November is even more necessary now than it was then. In our opinion, the President's fear that inflation may gain dangerous headway in the coming months is fully justified in view of the strain put on the price structure by tax reduction, foreign aid and increased military expenditures. We also agree with his thesis that the Administration should have reserve powers to impose selective controls over prices and wages as well as authority to allocate goods in scarce supply and establish more effective checks over credit expansion. However, this program, sound though it is in principle, would entail a degree of peacetime economic regimentation that Congress has no intention of considering in an election year. Under the circumstances, the time and energy that the President has expended on a lost cause could have been devoted much more effectively to vigorous support of specific measures to cope with threatened inflation, such as proposals for giving the Federal Reserve authorities additional powers to check inflationary expansion of bank credit.

Marriner S. Eccles, formerly chairman and now vice chairman of the Reserve Board, has been one of the most persistent and persuasive advocates of tighter credit controls. Moreover, he has repeatedly supported demands for other direct forms of control desired by the President. Testifying only last week before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, Mr. Eccles anticipated President Truman's warning that disastrous inflation will overtake the country in the absence of "effective checks on the free play of economic forces."

Although Mr. Eccles, like the President, displays poor strategy by shooting at too many targets, he does have a positive program for credit control deserving of Administration support. Yet the President has not only demoted Mr. Eccles but has also withheld indorsement of the latest Reserve Board proposals for tightening the reserve requirements of member banks, saying that Mr. Eccles speaks only for himself. The attitude of Secretary of the Treasury Snyder is sufficiently revealed by his admission that he didn't even know what Mr. Eccles had recommended when he appeared before the Joint Committee.

The President stressed the dangerous inflationary potentialities of a return to deficit financing in his address to the editors. Why, then, does he show a conspicuous lack of concern about the present powerlessness of the Federal Reserve System to restrain the inflationary expansion of credit that would be stimulated by a return of deficit financing, involving sales of Government securities to the banks?

Women's Status

Representatives of outstanding women's organizations, labor groups, and the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor appeared last week before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee in support of the equal status bill. The ultimate objective of this measure is abolishment of legal discriminations against women that are not justified by differences in "physical structure, biological or social function." In our opinion it provides a rational and practicable method of improving the legal status of women, in striking contrast to the proposed equal rights amendment that would deprive women of essential legislative protection by insisting on complete equality of rights under the law without regard to sex.

It is not a mere coincidence that organizations leading the fight to secure better working conditions for women and free them from unjust social and economic disabilities imposed by law or custom are opposed to the equal rights amendment. For much of the work that has been done to establish real as distinguished from illusory equality between men and women would be swept away by the equal rights amendment. The equal status bill, on the other hand, recognizes the need for legal distinctions based on sex and aims at removal of only those discriminatory laws and administrative regulations that reflect an irrational sexual bias.

So much for the ultimate objective of the bill, which, insofar as the Federal Government is concerned, could be attained without much difficulty following its enactment. The difficult task, however is to induce the State governments to revise or abolish laws that discriminate unfairly against women. It seems more than doubtful whether three fourths of the States would approve the equal rights amendment if presented for their approval. And if they did so, the Federal Government would be confronted by the formidable task of trying to compel all the States to modify their laws in accordance with general directives. The result would inevitably be to create legal confusion and endless litigation and to arouse profound resentment on the part of State governments because of Federal interference.

No such pressure is contemplated by the equal status bill. It provides for the establishment of a commission to study and review Federal and State laws affecting the status of women and to recommend legislation required to bring those laws into conformity with declared policy. The director of the Women's Bureau, Frieda S. Miller, thinks that the legal situation as to discriminations against women is fairly well known. What is needed is an evaluation of existing laws to determine what changes are essential. If this spade work is well done, a basis will be offered for sound legislative action. The States would remain free to take or leave the commission's recommendations. But it is our belief that the absence of compulsion would positively encourage the States to abolish laws affecting women's rights that are not in accord with present-day concepts of fairness and genuine equality of opportunity under the law.

Security By Proscription

There is a specious rationality about the legislation to curb communism approved the other day by the House Committee on Un-American Activities which makes it particularly perilous. Indubitably, Communists and some of their bedfellows are a menace to the body politic; indubitably, their devotion to a foreign country is such that they cannot be allowed to hold positions of trust within our own Government. The Committee on Un-American Activities proposes to deal with them, however, by proscription in the guise of exposure. It would require registration and disclosure of membership and of contributors on the part of the Communist Party itself and on the part of all "Communist front" organizations. The justification for this proscription is a legislative declaration that the Communist Party is a "political conspiracy" endeavoring to "subvert the interest of the United States to that of a foreign Communist power."

The Government of the United States is by no means defenseless against the agents of a foreign power or other persons seeking to overthrow it. There is in force at the present time the McCormack Act requiring registration of agents of foreign principals and the Voorhis Act requiring registration of organizations which are agents of foreign governments. There is also a Federal law, the Smith Act, forbidding anyone to advocate the violent overthrow of any government in the United States and another law forbidding the employment of any such person by the Federal Government. It would be a good idea, we think, to test in the courts whether Communists, by mere virtue of their membership in the Communist Party, fall afoul of these laws. The courts are the appropriate place to seek such a judgment.

But legislative designation of the Communist Party and "Communist front" organizations as guilty of violating these laws or any other laws having general application is at once a begging of the question and an infringement of the First Amendment to the Constitution. If Congress could, at its own unchecked discretion, declare it to be a fact that Communists and their fellow travelers are conspirators, it could do the same about Roman Catholics or trade unionists or organizers of a third party. Justice Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia put this succinctly and incontrovertibly the other day in his dissenting opinion on the Taft-Hartley Act Communist oath case. Congress cannot, he said, "directly abridge a right protected by the First Amendment merely by making an affirmation of a fact. If it could, it could flout the amendment with impunity."

The House of Representatives had an unhappy experience not long ago when it tried to forbid the Federal employment of three named individuals, Messrs. Watson, Dodd and Lovett, only to discover that it had enacted what the Supreme Court ultimately called a bill of attainder. The present proposal has much the same taint. Congress could properly require the registration of all organizations guilty of endeavoring to "subvert the interest of the United States to that of a foreign Communist power." It could, if it wished, follow the suggestion of Morris Ernst and require disclosure as to the contributions and expenditures of all organizations seeking to influence public opinion. It could, as Adolph Berle recommended, strengthen the Foreign Agents Registration Act to encompass all agents of foreign powers. But to single out the Communists for special restrictions under the law is to legislate in one of the ways the Constitution specifically prohibits.

In empowering the Attorney General to designate organizations as "Communist fronts," the House Committee proposal would improve in important respects upon the power to do this given the Attorney General under the President's loyalty investigation order. It would provide for a hearing and for judicial review. But the invidious character of the designation, the failure to recognize that an organization in which Communists have the upper hand one day may be reclaimed by loyal Americans the next, the extreme vagueness of the language defining a Communist front, all serve to make this a most dangerously blunderbuss sort of legislation.

Perhaps the most serious defect of the proposed legislation is its drastic extension of the doctrine of guilt by association. It would forbid employment in the Federal Government or issuance of a passport to any member of any organization designated a "Communist front." This is a proscription on so broad and unselective a scale as to be wholly repugnant to the most settled tenets of American democracy. It would catch saint and sinner alike, punish the innocent as well as the guilty. There is not much to be said for medicine that kills the patient along with the germs from which he is suffering.

Mr. Lewis And The Law

It is well to remember, as John L. Lewis faces the Federal District Court today, that the issue which takes him there is not simply whether the coal miners will go back to work. Reports from the mining areas say that from one fourth to one third of the soft coal miners are still idle. Undoubtedly this is due to Mr. Lewis' failure to instruct them in unequivocal language that the strike is over and that they should return to their jobs without further delay. In addition to this continued resistance to Justice Goldsborough's order of April 5, however, there is the flagrant and complete defiance of the court between April 5 and April 12.

The real issue, therefore, is whether the head of the United Mine Workers is subject to the law of the land, as are other citizens. Disposing of all the fine words that Mr. Lewis and his attorneys are spinning, the significant fact is that he claims the privilege of ignoring a court ruling designed to protect the national interest, under act of Congress, until he finds it convenient to obey. That sort of conduct has no place in any organized society. Certainly it tends to make a mockery of government by law. Under a democratic system no one can be permitted openly to flout the law because of the economic power that he wields without encouraging a state of anarchy.

It is from this background that Mr. Lewis' case has to be viewed, in our opinion, whatever may be the decision of Judge Goldsborough today. It is not merely a question of what would be most expedient in getting the men who are still on strike back to their jobs. Indeed, there are indications that if the decision should be adverse to Mr. Lewis and the UMW, the strike would again be extended. That would be a grave misfortune which would sharpen the issue for both the courts and Congress. But it does not alter the fact that more basic issues than continuance of the strike are at stake. In the end the Nation simply cannot permit its economy to be paralyzed by any individual, group or faction acting in defiance of its laws and its agencies of justice.

Europe Organizes

The charter of the permanent organization established by the European nations participating in the recovery program is a rather pallid document. Apart from the section relating to the administrative set-up, which follows the pattern of the United Nations, it consists chiefly of declarations by the signatories of laudable intentions to insure efficient use of American aid, to cooperate closely with one another in restoring prosperity to Europe, to work together for relaxation of restrictions on trade and reduction of tariff barriers, to take steps individually to achieve or maintain currency stability, and to make full use of available manpower.

Despite the irritating vagueness of the convention the mere establishment of the overall organization to promote consultation among the participants, and advise and admonish them is a promising development. Just how effective the new agency will be in overcoming the barriers of nationalistic pride and suspicion that have heretofore been such formidable obstacles to Europe's economic progress is an open question. Much will depend on the will of the people and especially the attitude of their political leaders. If they are convinced that united action is essential to future prosperity and to the preservation of their political freedom, they will undoubtedly find ways and means of working together for the attainment of common ends.

In any event, this experiment in European cooperation has been launched under favorable auspices. For so long as the countries belonging to the new organization are dependent upon American aid, they will be bound together by considerations of self-interest. While the United States is not directly responsible for the creation of the western European federation the Administrator for Economic Cooperation can do a great deal to strengthen its position and reenforce its recommendations by withholding aid from charter members that wilfully fail to fulfill their pledges of cooperation.

LISTEN TO THE WIND!

Who is the victor here, where these dead lie?
Let him come forward, let him now rejoice
In this unhurried flesh that melts to earth
Where only the wind has voice.

From four directions four winds blow
Into the houses—furtive and slow;
Blow against bodies of earth-born men
To drive them back to the earth again.

Flesh into leaves; blood into grass;
Out of their eyes the poppies bloom,
Symbol of sleep—to which they pass—
Deep in the earth's wide room.

Who is the victor? Who the victor here
Where death alone can live to flower?
Listen to the wind as it climbs the stair

Colombia Revolt

It seems that many innocent lives were sacrificed in Bogota to obtain a special effect upon the outside world. That conditions were ripe for revolution in Colombia does not absolve those who may have knowingly added to that country's sorrows. Every decent American naturally feels angry and disgusted.

It would be wise for the Americans of the United States, however, to pause until our own reliable newsmen who have been on the spot are able to turn in complete reports, which we must study thoroughly before we blame many conditions upon a single source.

There are a few strong forces that have much to gain from a war between Russia and the United States, but those who have fought know that everyone loses who spends his energy directly upon the enemy. He has so little left with which to rebuild.

Wherever murder is cold-bloodedly committed, there is the effort to put the blame on others, as in the Reichstag fire. The murder of a beloved leader is the oldest way to start large-scale trouble, once arms have been planted among malcontents. We, in this country, should get to know just how such shows are put on—it is apparently quite easy if one has the money—and we shall then know how to build lasting peace by avoiding the incidents which cause wars. Modest Customs Bureau

This week there appeared, relatively inconspicuously in your Jerry Kluttz column, an important piece of news for taxpayers—that a private management firm had made a favorable report on the administration of the Customs Bureau.

I am well acquainted with a career man of the Customs who has worked for many years here and abroad in Government work. He often deplored that the patriotic, conscientious, responsible conduct of the Customs Bureau seemed to result in loss of prestige rather than in respect for good work, because Customs didn't spend thousands of dollars bragging about itself.

I remember a time when another law enforcement agency, with a mobilization and exploitation of all media of publicity that was shocking, considering the grimness of the events, let us know it had its man.

Said my Customs friend: "We would have pulled him in by the suspenders. Wouldn't have occurred to us to mention it."

Knowing Latin America

Seventeen years ago, the 21 American countries set aside April 14 in commemoration of their independence.

The United States is in need of friendship desperately now since our relations with Russia are unfavorable. The Latin American nations have pledged their support to the United States in opposing communism. We are sure every citizen realizes the importance of this support, now since the Bogota conference more than ever, and would, if he could, try to promote better understanding of our neighbors to the South. A fine place to do it is right here in the Capital of the United States today.

Read the articles and news reports on Latin America in this paper today and every day; listen every day for Latin-American music; go to your library for books and articles on Latin America; visit the Pan American Union, not once, but often—exhibits change frequently. Study Latin-American history in high school, college or community groups. Make an effort to find other ways of knowing our good neighbors and how their affairs affect us.

Continuing Immigration

I note that the press is still clamoring for Congress to let in more immigrants, but I have not seen where any publication (except one) has told the public how many are coming in now, through one method or another.

In the last year some 500,000 persons came in, immigrants and nonimmigrants, as against 325,000 the year before. Of these 500,000 nearly 150,000 are to be in permanently. I assume that it does not take a Cassandra to divine that many of the balance of the 500,000 will never leave these shores, though it would take a Cassandra to tell how many come in here illegally—and never leave.

It is obvious from the figures that the specific number mentioned in pending bills will not be the actual number that will come in. The public ought to know that many persons have been entering the United States all the time.

Judicial Right

A news item appearing in your issue of April 15 stated that the superintendent of police believes that Judge Ellen K. Raedy should apologize because she expressed disbelief of the testimony of a certain police officer during a trial.

Is it possible that the superintendent of police questions the right and the duty of a judge sitting on the bench of the Municipal Court to pass upon the credibility of a witness in a nonjury trial, or, is it that the superintendent is tacitly advising the public and judges that his police officers are to be placed in a category separate and apart from other mere humans such that their testimony is inviolate? If that be true, then it would be entirely unnecessary to have a trial; it would be cheaper for the District to appoint some officer to hear the testimony of police officers and thereafter mete out sentences and fines.

Such a tendency is quite a very dangerous one. We believe that, if left unbridled, it will do serious damage to the administration of justice in the District of Columbia in keeping with the American judicial tradition.

Oh, Noah!

Munchausen came out of Russia with some far-fetched yarns, but no tale he told tops the one the Russians are telling about their "25-years-before-Kitty-Hawk, steam-propelled plane."

I suppose their next big "discovery" will be an "old painting" of Noah leaving a Moscow hardware store with a hammer in one hand and a sickle in the other.

Mrs. Meyer On The Kinsey Report

In The Washington Post of April 15, an address upon the Kinsey Report, by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, struck me as being worth a reply. While I am not defending the report in toto, I notice that there was no claim made to any scientific knowledge upon the subject. In fact, she bases her entire objection to the report on moral grounds, upon which scientists have been attacked for years. Mrs. Meyer was addressing the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, and her remarks may have been pertinent to the occasion, even to the point of injecting the religious idea into patients along with the serum. But the address was given a column and a half of publicity, so it must be held to concern the public as a whole.

The Kinsey Report is an attempt to ascertain causes and effects of sexual behavior in relation to the whole scheme of social disorganization which we endure today. Some individuals hold that the sexual forces are the key to the problems. At any rate, publicity is given to the scientific approach at a time when the moral cycle is at a low ebb. As an ordinary, low-grade citizen, I think that I could give Mrs. Meyer "cards and spades" on the question of morality, which after all is an abstract topic, and in view of the many standards of morality which have been set up by society and have failed ignominiously in recent years.

Mrs. Meyer attacked the statistics gathered "in this area" as unreliable, and also deplored the emphasis placed upon various sexual practises, and the conclusions drawn therefrom. She forgets, or ignores, two important considerations, namely, that in a report of this kind there is bound to be a great variance of figures, and that everyone reading this report has the right to draw his own conclusions.

As to her fear of the effects of the book upon the young, this was "old stuff" when I was a boy. An impulse of the young will either be carried through or repressed, regardles of books. There is no doubt that young people today receive a great deal less attention from their parents than they did years ago, and that this is not entirely due to the pressure of outside interests upon the life of the parents. It is due partly to the growth of the idea that the young are maturing earlier than they did years ago. All this Mrs. Meyer knows, of course, but it is pertinent to refute the idea that the social mores should again be used as a lever to retard scientific, and consequently social progress.

WILLIAM P. THOMAS, JR.

Washington.

My sister, rearing two boys, has read the report with gratitude for the insight it has given her on human behavior, and considers that she has grown as a mother for having been forewarned of behavior patterns of which she had little previous knowledge; forewarned, she will know how to teach. She is looking forward to a similar book on sex behavior in girls, because she has a little daughter. Further, a friend who recently returned to high school teaching after several years in Government work, expressed the greatest interest and enlightenment from the Kinsey Report. A woman of the world, she said that she felt amazing ignorance in her past and looked forward to renewed understanding in her dealings with adolescents as a result of this report which Mrs. Meyer heaps with ridicule and contempt.

Mrs. Meyer's real quarrel with the Kinsey Report, of course, can be boiled down to the old, old problem: Should all art, literature, news, movies, etc., be held down to the grammar school level? The true solution of that problem has never been found. But is that the fault of Mr. Kinsey? Why don't we go to work on that basic question and stop picking on those who are unfortunate enough to make Mrs. Meyer wonder "what its effect would be on youth?" Are we to stop all research on that score?

The Satanic Doctor

THE GOEBBELS' DIARIES, translated and edited by Louis P. Lochner. (Doubleday, $4.)

Of the authenticity of the documents from which Mr. Lochner made this selection there is, I suppose, no doubt. The originals are said to have been typewritten—whether by Josef Goebbels himself or by some confidential secretary is not clear—on fine rag paper, such as would have been available to only a few highly placed personages in Germany at the time. Had Herr Goebbels been content with paper of meaner quality it is probable that his diaries would have perished with him; as it is, portions of them appear to have been lost and some of the rest to have been severely charred.

The story, as related by Hugh Gibson in a publisher's preface, is that the Russians who took possession of the Nazi Propaganda Ministry after the fall of Berlin were more interested in Herr Goebbels' filing cabinets than in their contents. They seem to have dumped the papers into a courtyard in their eagerness to get the cabinets loaded into trucks for shipment to Moscow. Later in an ephemeral burst of tidiness and efficiency the Russians set fire to the litter in the courtyard. But whether for lack of draught or because of rain, a good deal of the stuff refused to burn and was presently carted off by hungry Germans in search of something that could be salvaged and traded. To the original finder the diaries seem to have been of interest chiefly for the binders in which they were enclosed. The pages were tied up into bales and sold as junk. They passed through a good many hands before coming under the eye of one who suspected they might represent something more valuable than wastepaper. Thus they fell at length into the possession of Mr. Frank E. Mason, but by that time the sequence of the pages had been lost and had laboriously to be rediscovered. The ultimate disposition of the Goebbels papers is in some doubt. Mr. Mason, it seems, wants to give them to the Hoover Library at Stanford University, but the Alien Property Custodian has claimed them as Government property.

Herr Goebbels was certainly an unpleasant fellow and a dangerous one, detested by the generality of Germans and distrusted even by his party comrades. But his day-to-day observation of personalities and events seems to sustain, what is reluctantly admitted by Mr. Lochner, who knew and disliked him, that Goebbels, for all his vanity, was the most clear-sighted of the Nazi hierophants. He was a revolutionary careerist, who thoroughly understood that he had staked both his life and his soul in a blind gamble for power. Out of this knowledge arose his demoniac energy and his grandiose cruelties, for Goebbels, apparently, the great driving will behind the effort to exterminate the European Jews. But his intelligence permitted him to recognize in Stalin another such adventurer as himself. When it became evident, after the surrender of Italy, that the only escape from eventual defeat and destruction lay in dividing Russians and the Anglo-American powers, and in making peace with one or the other, Goebbels saw that Stalin would be more amenable to pragmatic arguments although Hitler seems to have persisted for long in believing the opposite

It was also as a revolutionary that Goebbels understood, much sooner than the statesmen of Great Britain and America, the incongruity of the principles of the Atlantic Charter with the alliance of expediency with Soviet Russia, and ingeniously exploited it in his propaganda. After the German armies had been turned back in Russia, Stalin was able to exact from his allies whatever he might please as his price for remaining in the war. In November, 1943, while the conference at Moscow was in progress Herr Goebbels, noting the alarm among the neutrals, wrote that "London already concedes to the Soviets that the small states of Europe no longer have any right to existence. . . . This war was started because of a midget state, but now, when it has reached the culminating point, such states allegedly have no right to exist any more. All fundamental conceptions of how nations are to live together seem upside down in this wild spiritual and political confusion. Therein lies our great chance." Goebbels was also quick to perceive the value to his internal propaganda of the rashly conceived policy of unconditional surrender, and its value steadily increased as the Russians began to talk of drafts of German manpower to rebuild their cities and Britons like Lord Vansittart and Americans like Mr. Morgenthau began to talk of a Carthaginian peace.

The portions of the diaries chosen by Mr. Lochner cover only the years 1942 and 1943, that is to say from a few weeks after Pearl Harbor, when Herr Goebbels was still confident of German victory, until the close of the Conference at Tehran, when he was almost persuaded that the game was up. Thus the book does not touch upon the two most interesting episodes of Goebbels' life of power—his ferocious vengeance against the conspirators who attempted the assassination of Hitler in July, 1944, and his last melodramatic days in the bunkers of the Berlin Chancery, where the National Socialist Revolution ended in the suicide of the Fuehrer and his entourage.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

To Change Horses

FOR THOSE who believe that the paramount issue in the election is how to change horses in mid-stream without falling into the river the Nebraska and Wisconsin primaries are encouraging. They show that there are no longer, as there were in 1940 and 1944, irreconcilable differences between the Republicans who live in the inland States and those who live on the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards. The MacArthur campaign clearly, and the Taft campaign in considerable measure, were a good test of whether the division persists.

Lippmann

It is now certain that the old guard Republican machine no longer has a popular majority among Republicans in any section of the country. The main mass of the party consists of Republicans who are for Stassen, Dewey, or Vandenberg. Among them there are no deep differences. For the rivalry between Stassen and Dewey is personal, and does not sharply divide their followers; in Vandenberg the Republicans have a man who is not only acceptable to all the elements of the new majority but also to all but the frantic fringe of the old guard.

THEREFORE, unless the old guard politicians choose to defy the will of the mass of the Republicans, a combination worked out by Stassen, Dewey, and Vandenberg, and one may hope with Taft, can unite the party effectively and be as certain, as it is possible to be in politics, of taking over the administration of the Government. A combination of this sort made in June would come very near to making the election campaign a formality. The country and the world would know in June who were to be the President, the Vice President, and perhaps also the Secretary of State.

All would have been done that it is possible to do under our system of government to remove the uncertainty of a bitterly contested election, and the general paralysis of authority which exists in that dangerous interval when one administration is defeated but still in office and the new administration is not yet formed. The nomination of a Vandenberg-Stassen or a Vandenberg-Dewey ticket in June would assure as much continuity and would create as much confidence as are possible in a year when a change of administration is as necessary as it is unavoidable.

SUCH A solution of the Republican problem would at the same time open the way to a solution of the problem of the Democrats. This is how to become an effective opposition, and not to be, like the Republicans in 1932 and 1936, so disunited and so feeble that they can provide no check and restraint upon the party in power.

This is the conclusive reason why Democratic leaders, who feel responsibility for the party, are compelled to find a way of inducing Mr. Truman to step down. If the main consideration were winning the election, the Democratic leaders could say that Mr. Truman might as well be defeated as well as any one else.

But the Democrats cannot be serious about winning this election. Their concern is to survive as an opposition by electing Congressmen and Senators and Governors and mayors and local officials. There can be little doubt that a national ticket headed by Mr. Truman would be a severe handicap, and perhaps even disastrous. For Mr. Truman, unhappily for him and for his party, not only divides the Democrats, he disintegrates them.

A VANDENBERG-Stassen or a Vandenberg-Dewey ticket would put an end to the idea that the Democratic Party can be reunited and maintained in power by drafting General Eisenhower. There would be no reason for drafting him, as there might be if the Republicans nominated General MacArthur or Mr. Martin, or even Senator Taft. And there would be no excuse for sacrificing him, as inevitably he would be sacrificed, if he undertook the impossible task of gluing together the Democratic factions that Mr. Truman and Mr. Wallace have jointly and severally torn asunder.

RECOGNIZING the fact that after 16 years in office, it is time to retire, the Democrats could then nominate, not a candidate for President, but a caretaker for the party. The issues which now divide the Democrats would not be settled. They cannot be settled. They can only be allowed to subside, once the cause is removed which has aggravated them.

That cause is the feeling in the country that the men closest to President Truman have not been politically disinterested in dealing with the explosive questions of our age—with sectionalism, racialism, nationalism, with the Red menace and the Red scare, and the issues of liberty and of war and peace.

All these questions are objectively difficult and dangerous. But our problems are aggravated by the subjective anxiety, hysteria, and moral disorientation which now pervade our efforts to deal with them. These nervous disorders are in themselves as dangerous as the problems which excite them. They stem—so it seems to me—from a loss of confidence in the authority, the example, and the competence of the inner circle of the Truman Administration.

U. S. to Insist Other Nations Help on Palestine Problem

Will Not Attempt Settlement Alone, Spokesman States

New York, April 18 (AP).—The United States will not try to solve the Palestine problem by itself, an American spokesman said today.

He declared that if several countries cannot agree on joint action, there is a possibility no solution can be found to end the Holy Land controversy.

The spokesman said the United Stotes will insist in the second special United Nations Assembly on Palestine that other countries must bear their part of any Palestine solution.

Supporters of the U. N. plan to partition Palestine into Jewish and Arab countries were rallying their forces for an Assembly fight Monday (10.30 a. m. EST.).

The backers of partition are asking about the United States trusteeship plan which they said they had expected to be before the Assembly at this time.

The American spokesman said the United States situation is roughly this:

1. There is not in existence in the American delegation here any formal plan for temporary trusteeship for the Holy Land. No formal plan ever was promised.

2. The United States is continually consulting other countries, including Britain and France, on joint action on Palestine.

U. N. delegates generally expressed fear that the truce order by the Security Council yesterday would be ignored.

Jewish Key Point Reported Captured By Arab Legion

Jerusalem, April 18 (AP).—British and Arab reports said tonight fighters from Trans-Jordan's Arab Legion had occupied the Jewish settlement of Neve Yaacov (New Jacob), five miles north of Jerusalem.

Official Jewish sources denied capture of the settlement, a key position on the main highway to the Arab military stronghold of Nablus.

An Arab spokesman claimed 50 Jews were killed. A Haganah source said one Jew was killed and eight were wounded, and two Arabs and one British Legion officer were killed.

The Arab Legion is the force of King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan. It is commanded by British officers.

Last night Arab military sources in Cairo said Abdullah had dispatched legion forces to Palestine because Soviet commanders were leading the Jewish fighters.

Official Jewish sources denied the Arab accusation. It was first made a week ago by the Arab commander attacking the Jewish strongpoint of Mishmar Haemek. A reporter found the Haganah commander in the settlement was a Bulgarian Jew who came to Palestine in 1929.

(At Cairo, Abdel Wahed Soliman Subel Pasha, a retired Egyptian general, and his staff officers reviewed preparations for a large-scale Arab offensive in southern Palestine to open in a few days.)

An official announcement said five Jews were killed in the Haifa area. The unofficial death toll since November 29 mounted to 2969.

Matter Of Fact

The Dewey Power Play

THE MEASURE of Gov. Harold Stassen's success can now easily be given. Senator Robert A. Taft dropped everything over the weekend to hurry to Ohio, to try to stop the dreaded Stassen tide in his own State. Meanwhile, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, always a cooler operator, made a desperate but behind-the-scenes power play to line up Pennsylvania, Michigan and Indiana support, once and for all, prior to the Oregon primary.

Of the two operations, Governor Dewey's was by far the more interesting. Even if Senator Taft saves his bacon in Ohio, he will hardly gain the Republican nomination. He is blocked by his singularly poor showing as a vote-getter in Nebraska, and the cruel verdict of the opinion polls that he is almost the only living Republican whom President Truman can still defeat.

On the other hand, if Governor Dewey can get his eager hands on a substantial proportion of the Pennsylvania, Indiana and Michigan delegations, the gain of strength will make him front runner again. He will then become the most formidable stop-Stassen candidate in his own right. In this respect, Dewey's position is markedly different from Taft's.

HE HAS AN ANSWER to his primary defeats by Stassen, even if Stassen wallops him in Oregon. Thus far, at least, he has made a slightly better showing than his rivals in the opinion polls. Thus the Dewey managers can continue to argue that their man is the real choice of "the great, rancid American people," as the late Samuel Blythe once described us all.

During the weekend the Dewey forces in effect put a pistol to the heads of the important waverers in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Indiana, saying to them in effect, "Now or never." The chief waverers who are understood to have been approached are Gov. James Duff of Pennsylvania, Representative Charles Halleck of Indiana and Arthur Summerfield of Michigan, national committeeman.

Dewey was forced to adopt "now or never" tactics, one can surmise. Only an immediate, impressive accretion of strength can prevent other desertions from his standards. He must get his recruits now, before Oregon, partly because Messrs. Duff, Halleck and Summerfield would be much less likely to join up after a big defeat in Oregon, and partly because the timely reinforcement will give other Dewey supporters the courage to withstand another reverse.

The responses of the waverers are unknown as yet. Certainly Dewey's proposal is more tempting than it seems superficially. The power play could work. And the waverers can write their own tickets, no doubt—it would be far from surprising, for example, to see Summerfield turn up as chairman of the Republican National Committee if Dewey is nominated.

YET THIS STILL does not tell whether Duff, Halleck and Summerfield, or any of them, will decide to go along with Dewey now. Halleck, intensely ambitious, will be hampered by the remarkably envenomed row over the governorship which is now preoccupying the Indiana Republicans. As for Duff, whose State is the most important, he has repeatedly signified his preference for Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg as Republican nominee. Dewey is supposed to be second choice. But will he abandon hope of Vandenberg and accept his second choice? And if so, can he deliver the bulk of the Pennsylvania delegates, with Senator Martin and the redoubtable Messrs. Pew and Grundy having something to say on the subject?

As for Summerfield, it has already been recorded in this space how he was tempted to join the Dewey camp sometime ago. On that occasion, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg told him he was entirely free to follow his fancy. But after consideration, the Michigan national committeeman preferred the role of a draft-Vandenberg leader, and set up his State delegatoin with this purpose in mind. Now the same choice confronts him again, but with infinitely greater urgency. He is likely to experience considerable agony of mind before he makes his decision.

At the moment, therefore, not even Governor Dewey can tell whether his power play will succeed. The conclusion is obvious, however. The Dewey and Taft forces are already more enfeebled than they appear. If Stassen's onward march continues through the next primaries, a very great number of Republican professionals, herding delegates with the peevish ferocity of aging collie dogs, are going to be needed to stop the Minnesoto former Governor at Philadelphia.

Schuman Reveals Defense-Boost Plans

Poitiers, France, April 18 (U.P.)—Premier Robert Schuman announced today the government will introduce in Parliament a series of bills for "military reorganization" to bolster the nation's defense.

Schuman said the government will ask next week for rapid consideration and approval of the military measures. He said they will cost France "only the indispensable minimum."

Schuman said the government is determined to protect interior security "against any undertaking of disorder."

The high cost of not seeing your attorney

Businessmen are accustomed to having their contracts and conveyances drawn by their attorneys. They know that a document, to be good, must be legal.

Your Will—embodying your specific instructions about the distribution of your property for your family's future financial protection—is also a legal document. As such it, too, should be drawn by your lawyer and executed in accordance with the law under his guidance. The fee you pay for your attorney's services is money well spent, since a home-made Will—in which you might fail to express your wishes properly—may be worse than no Will at all in the way it may affect your family's future. Make no mistake—the cost of not seeing your attorney can be high!

In addition, Union Trust Company has learned, from long experience gained in the administration of estates of all sizes, that family changes, changes in the size and value of property and changes in tax laws can render a once adequate Will ineffective—if it is not kept up-to-date.

That is why we urge you to visit your attorney without delay, to make certain that your present plan for your family's financial welfare is the best that can be devised for your present situation. Otherwise you may fail in your intention to do as much as possible for your family with what you leave.

'No Compromise'

Tax Repeal Bloc Scents Oleo Victory

By the United Press

Congressmen fighting for repeal of Federal oleomargarine taxes are so confident of victory they have turned down a "compromise" offered by some members of the anti-repeal bloc, it was disclosed yesterday.

An informed source said they feel too sure of victory to consider any "so-called compromise." He said the repeal forces are certain the House will vote to kill the tax when the measure comes to the floor April 26.

The Federal tax is 10 cents a pound on colored oleo and a quarter-cent on the white variety. Southern Congressmen whose home Sates produce the cottonseed and peanut oil that go to make oleo want the tax repealed outright.

Senator Taft Hits Stassen

Vandenberg had been prominently mentioned as a possible party Presidential candidate and potential nominees customarily were not chosen for the keynote address.

Others mentioned were Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, and Senators Lodge of Massachusetts; Wherry of Nebraska, and Baldwin of Connecticut.

The committee also will recommend a permanent convention chairman and choose a secretary, chief sergeant at arms, sergeant at arms, chief doorkeeper, doorkeeper, parliamentarian and official reporter.

In New Jersey the spotlight was turned briefly on that State's primary at which delegates will be chosen Tuesday by both parties with the outcome practically certain. It seemed certain President Truman, strongly backed by State Democratic Leader Frank Hague and with no opposition, would walk away with the 44 Democratic delegates. The 35 Republican delegates appeared equally sure to be lined up for Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll as a "favorite son" candidate.

In addition, three supporters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur sought places as Republican delegates under the label: "Conqueror of Japan for President." State law forbids placing a candidate's name on the ballot for presidential delegate without his approval.

For the overall Republican picture, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York showed more strength currently than any of the other numerous presidential hopefuls. Stassen ran second on the basis of present commitments and Taft wasn't even showing.

Of the 428 delegates chosen to date in 18 States, 111 are committed to Dewey; 61 to Stassen, and eight, all in Wisconsin, to MacArthur. The remaining 248 are nominally not committed, but Idaho's 11 were instructed to vote as a unit subject to the will of their majority an da majority already has expressed itself as favoring Dewey.

The sole remaining candidate heard from yesterday was Henry A. Wallace, whose Third Party apparently had split the CIO-PAC wide open. At New York the United Radio, Electrical and Machine Workers of America (CIO) parted from the parent Political Action Committee and set up their own. Presumably it would work for Wallace.

And at Rocky Mount, N. C., the South Atlantic Regional Council of the CIO Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers reaffirmed its support of Wallace and candidates pledged to the former Democratic vice president. The delegates represented locals in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Hostile Attitude Persists in Face Of Truman Appeal

By the United Press

President Truman's latest request for passage of his 10-point anti-inflation program ran up against the hostile Republican-controlled Congress again yesterday.

Already anticipated by many members of the House and Senate, Mr. Truman's renewed demand for standby wage-price and rationing controls encountered the same "come and show us" attitude that prevailed when he proposed it last November. Republicans available for comment on the President's Saturday night plea before the American Society of Newspaper Editors left no doubt that the GOP position remains unchanged.

Attitude of Leaders

GOP congressional leaders—including Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., and Senator Kenneth S. Wherry—have said that no controls will be restored now but that, if an emergency arises, they will be standing by to meet it.

A special report prepared by the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Agricultural Economics said meantime that, barring some unexpected development, employment and prices seem unlikely to drop to the "extremely low level of the 1930's" in the foreseeable future.

The report was prepared at the request of Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) of the House Agriculture Committee. He asked for data covering probable trends in farm production, population and prices over the next 25 years, to guide his committee in drafting a new long-range program.

The bureau said the outlook for agriculture in the next 5 to 25 years seems "relatively favorable," although farm prices are bound to drop somewhat. It made no mention of possible steps by industry and the Government to stave off mass unemployment if there should be a depression or even a major recession.

Challenge to Producers

Commenting on the President's speech; Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) said that "one way to create a condition is to create fear about it." He added that the President's speech was a challenge to American producers to see that prices do not go higher.

Representative Judd (R., Minn.) said he is not convinced that controls are necessary, although he recognized that "you can't make huge expenditures for European relief and preparedness without shortages and rising prices."

Democratic congressional reaction was summed up by Representative Spence (D., Ky.) ranking Democrat on the House Banking Committee, who said, "Something must be done. There is no greater thief than inflation. It will take everything you have. You can't do anything merely by the voluntary acquiescence of the producers."

He referred to the system of voluntary allocation of scarce materials which Congress gave Mr. Truman instead of the arbitrary powers he sought.

General Electric Makes Price Cuts

New York, April 18 (AP).—General Electric Co. today announced a five per cent reduction in prices of a line of power products including fractional horsepower motors, switch gear, conventional transformers and power capacitators.

The reduction became effective last Friday and is the second made by the company this year. The first was a 3 to 10 per cent cut in other products at the start of the year.

The company said its annual volume of business in the items reduced last Friday totaled around 200 million dollars and that the action was taken to combat inflation.

Taft Predicts His Version Of Housing Bill Will Pass

orization is increased by 10 million dollars to finance operations until the newly extended date of July 1, 1949. Maximum amount of loans has been increased from $3000 to $4000.

4. The RFC is authorized to lend up to 50 million dollars to manufacturers to increase production of prefabricated houses or large-scale modernized site construction.

5. A National Home Mortgage corporation is established as a part of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. The corporation would have a borrowing power of 250 million dollars to furnish a source of secondary credit for residential mortgage financing. Chief pressure for this comes from veterans because so many banks are filled up with all the mortgages they want. The Government thus will take over some of these mortgages in order that the bank can extend loans to other veterans.

4 Per Cent Limit

6. FHA insurance of 90 per cent loans to housing cooperatives is authorized with a maximum maturity of 40 years and interest not to exceed 4 per cent per annum. Cooperatives established by World War II veterans will entitled to 95 per cent loans.

7. Investments in moderate priced rental housing are insured by the Federal Government. Under this the Government undertakes to insure equity investments in large subdivisions as made by insurance companies or large estates. Rents can be set to yield a 3½ per cent return, with the Government guaranteeing a minimum of 2¾ per cent. The Government can insure projects up to one billion dollars under this program. The sum of 10 million dollars is authorized to operate this yield insurance program.

8. For slum clearance and urban development, the Government allocates 500 million dollars over the next five years. The Government would give grants-in-aid to cities razing slum areas amounting to two thirds the cost of clearing the land. The cities would have to rebuild themselves. In addition, the Federal Government could lend cities up to one billion dollars.

9. The bill calls for the construction of 500,000 low-cost public housing units in the next five years. The Federal guaranty would amount roughtly to about 160 million dollars a year for 40 years. Rents would be about $5 a room.

Sponsors of the T-E-W bill hope that the stimulus given to private construction will result in a total of 15 million new homes by 1958.

McCarthy's series of amendments, tentatively adopted Thursday, have three major points of difference with those offered by Taft.

McCarthy would insist that welfare families have a priority in public housing. McCarthy says that in most public housing developments families on relief are either barred or limited to 10 per cent. This works a hardship, he maintained, on widows with small children who have to receive city aid. Both Taft and McCarthy would give first preference to veterans.

The Wisconsin Senator also has an amendment which would provide free housing plans and half the cost of construction to the Nation's 1500 paraplegic cases—the veterans' of World War II condemned to spend life in a wheelchair.

McCarthy attempted to extend the secondary mortgage provisions to Title 1, Class 3 loans. These are the very low priced homes. McCarthy told the Senate he added this provision at the request of Western and Southern Congressmen from those States where houses could be built for $3000 and $4000.

One on the Aisle—

A New 'Macbeth' And a Birthday

By Richard L. Coe

SHAKESPEARE IS HAVING another birthday this week and once again the wise men are bickering.

This time it's Michael Redgrave's "Macbeth" which has the most quoted soothsayers on opposite sides of the fence. With Flora Robson as Lady Macbeth, the British actor is making his American stage debut in a production staged by Norris Houghton for New York's Theater Incorporated.

Put this department down as an enthusiastic admirer of the gory production Houghton has given the melodrama on the stage of 41st street's National Theater. In New York, the Times' Brooks Atkinson is its most arder defender. He's been raving about it with rare enthusiasm.

On the negative side are such chaps as George Jean Nathan, of the Journal-American, and Howard Barnes, of the Herald Tribune. Their particular criticism is directed against Redgrave's acting of the central figure. There's something to be said for this, since the handsome film star is sporting a rather extraordinary wig and is admittedly not getting the most poetry out of the familiar lines.

But surely, this is not the point of a performance of the goriest of Shakespeare's plays. It's a melodrama from start to finish and that's how it's been directed. The thing slams along at a rollicking speed that seems quite what the Elizabethans wanted for their show. They're playing it for the meaty blood-curdler that it is.

When Duncan is murdered and Lady Macbeth returns to their guest's room to pick up the knives her shilly-shallying husband has left behind, the following scene shows both host and hostess with their arms dripping blood. It's a spectacle you don't often see in even the least prissy movies.

Then there's a neat accent on the supernatural. "Macbeth" is long on the occult and this time you have not just three witches, but three witches and three enormous Things that goad the weird sisters along. These six alternate on the lines Shakespeare has given the supernatural and for the first time in our "Macbeth" experience (there have been four) we got an eerie sensation, not that uncomfortable feeling you often get that three shabby character players are behaving with self-conscious foolery.

Macduff Scene Splendid

Apart from these accents on the gory and the supernatural, the present production offers two other clarifications. One is the business of how Macbeth managed to employ those murderers who do in Banquo. Houghton makes them thugs who appeal to have reasonable business with the Scottish king. They don't seem hired brigands; they're giving you the idea that for the king's protection, Banquo should be moved to his heavenly home.

The scene between Lady Macduff and her son, too is admirably played by Beatrice Straight and Judson Rees. The lonely family of Macduff makes for a poignant contrast to the bloody business around them.

Miss Robson's Lady Macbeth suffers from the inevitable comparison with Judith Anderson's playing of the part in the recent Maurice Evans reading. She enters at full pitch with Macbeth's warning letter; the scene is eloquent of what is to follow. Her sleep-walking is less electric than Miss Anderson's. Still Miss Robson does manage to make her more of a woman than Miss Anderson's chilling diatribe suggested.

The Redgrave king is more an integral part of the story than the rich, fruity tones Evans made him. There is less poetry in Redgrave but more the ambitious male. Starting out from this conception, the portrayal certainly makes sense..

Folger Notes Birthday

But, as we've said, the writing boys are arguing over the melodrama's latest appearance with the usual hubbub every new Shakespearean production causes. It's all just one more remarkable facet of the fabulous life which began at Stratford 384 years ago come Friday.

Locally, the Folger Shakespeare Library will be observing the day with its yearly tradition of words on the great man from an authority. Friday night, at 8:30, Dr. Thomas Marc Parrott, emeritus professor of English at Princeton, will deliver an address on "Hamlet on the Stage." Limited capacity of the library's auditorium means that this must be to an invited audience.

Dr. Parrott's talk not only will be to refresh memories of John Gielgud's and Maurice Evans' recent Hamlets (the full-length and the GI), but will pave the way for the Laurence Olivier film version, which is to have its premiere in London next month.

Anti-Union Activity Voids Plant Vote

NLRB Decides Law Was Not Violated But Company's Campaign Went Too Far

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday set aside a plant election because of an employer's antiunion campaign even though the campaign was held not to be an unfair labor practice.

It was the first time the board had voided an election under such circumstances. The members split 3-2 on it.

The election was held July 31, 1946, at the Pulaski, Tenn., plant of the General Shoe Corp. The AFL Boot and Shoe Workers were the only union on the ballot. The workers voted against the union.

The board said the president of the firm had called the employes into his office in groups of 20 or 25 and read them an "intemperate antiunion address." It said also that foremen were sent to the homes of workers to talk against the union.

The board held that these activities did not violate the unfair labor practice of the Taft-Hartley Act. But the majority said the activities went so far beyond customary campaigns of this kind that "we are not justified in assuming that the election results represented the employes' own true wishes."

gram. It is more important than guns and bombs."

Senator Dennis Chavez (D., New Mexico), gently rapped Roosevelt's suggestions to the Administration, saying "don't forget the prior President had 13 years to issue such an Executive Order and there wasn't any.

"Let's not get excited by a suggestion, perhaps made in excitement," Chavez said. "I am sorry the young man who spoke before me made the suggestion.

The Roosevelts left immediately after their talks and did not hear the Senator. Roosevelt has expressed himself in favor of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for President.

Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.) said the problem of civil rights is "going to be solved by intelligent white people and intelligent Negro people working together."

water that doesn't have the nitrate. This often works, if the disease hasn't gone too far. There is no practical way to take the nitrate out of water containing it, Weart said.

Two other treatments—use of Vitamin C and of a dye—also will overcome the syanosis.

Reports of blue babies from nitrate water had been received from Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, and Michigan, and also in Canada, Belgium and England.

New Yorkers Await 5c Fare Decision

New York, April 18 (AP).—New Yorkers are awaiting word from their mayor on whether they can continue to enjoy the longest five-cent ride in the world.

The city's perennial battle of the nickel fare, centered in New York's 270-mile subway system, reached a crisis above ground last week. Bus systems serving about 300,000 daily passengers rolled again Saturday after being strike-bound 11 days.

Behind the move to resume long-deadlocked negotiations was the expectation of the powerful CIO Transport Workers Union and bus companies' management that Mayor William O'Dwyer will favor a fare boost. O'Dwyer said he will disclose his stand on increasing the five-cent fare Tuesday.

In the bus crisis, companies said they could not meet union demands for wage increases on a five-cent fare. If bus fares are increased, transport officials say the nickel subway fare inevitably must rise too.

IS THIS THE
"Sweetest riding story ever told"?

SOMETIMES we get just a bit upset over our engineers.

A cautious bunch, their tendency toward understatement now and then lets us overlook some mighty good bets.

About all they wanted to say about their new Hi-Poised power was that it went much further than anything else they knew toward controlling engine vibration frequencies.

They let us say it would make engine sensation "practically imperceptible."

That it would do away with a lot of shudder that often passes for clutch chatter. That it would "have an effect" on riding softness and quiet.

Well! Folks have now had a chance to try out our '48 beauties with Hi-Poised power—and you should hear what they say!

"Sweetest ride of any car," they tell us.

"Such smoothness—it's unbelievable!" "What have you done?—It's wonderful!"

What we did was apply a wholly new system of engine mounting.

It's a system that suspends the engine, much as in a cradle. This leaves it free to rock, bob or "wag its tail" (as every engine must)—yet maintains firm control of such movement at all times and speeds.

Add this to other things—big, soft tires on extra wide Safety-Ride rims; gentle coil springs on all four wheels; ample size and weight to master jounce and jitter—and what do you get?

A definitely "sweeter" feel to the whole car. Soft, level going—with firm, sure footing. Lightness—with positive and dependable control.

In a phrase—"the sweetest riding story ever told," as it has been put.

Naturally, we'd like to have you size up our new Vibra-Shielded ride too.

After all, there's more to any car than meets the eye, even in this eye-winning beauty. And maybe this sweet and lovely ride is just what you've been waiting for.

SECRET OF THE VIBRA-SHIELDED RIDE
Two fat cushions of special composition, and placed with scientific accuracy, suspend the Buick engine at the points where vibration is most readily controlled. A third new mounting at the rear completes a precise system of controlling engine vibration frequencies. The result is to shield the entire car against vibration build-up and make a noticeably smoother ride.

Truman Throws 1st Ball to Open Season Today

33,000 Will See Nats, Yanks; Wynn Faces Reynolds on Mound

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Harry Truman, a $75,000-a-year left hander who is seeking another four-year contract, makes his 1948 debut at Griffith Stadium today, and will be relieved after one pitch. He will be replaced by Early Wynn of the Nats who pitches for a living, and the newest baseball season will commence at 3:01 p. m.

By the time President Truman arrives at 2:45 p. m. for the ceremonial pitch that is the final fillip of the pre-game program, most of the 33,000 fans will have beaten him to the park for the meaty feature of the day—the Nats vs. the New York Yankees.

Mr. Truman will head the official White House party in the bunting-draped presidential box abaft the Washington dugout, but he will be only one of the three presidential candidates in the park. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Speaker of the House Joe Martin will be within nodding distance of the White House box, and coveting it.

Nobody will get wet, according to the Weather Bureau. There will be clouds in the sky, but no threat of rain, and the temperature is supposed to be warmer than brisk.

The park capaciey has been increased by 3000 temporary seats in left field, and it will be a sell-out by game time. Fifteen hundred unsold bleacher seats will go on sale at the Stadium at 9 a. m., and at 2 p. m. standing room tickets will be sold to the first 2000 comers.

At 11 a. m., four hours before the Yankees go to bat, the stadium gates will be thrown open, and Goldman's Tireless Band will start tootling at noon. Ten minutes before game time the time-honored march to center field for the flag raising is scheduled with Speaker Martin, Basketball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, American League President Will Harridge, and Clark Griffith in the van.

Bucky Harris, a Washington manager for 13 years before he found new affluence with the pennant-winning Yankees, will greet Rookie Manager Joe Kuhel of the Nats in the presidential box before the game.

Like the Nats, who selected Wynn, their top winner of 1947, for the opening pitching assignment, Harris has turned to Allie Reynolds, Yankee right-hander who won 19 games last season.

In spanking new uniforms, featuring a new pin stripe in their home regalia, and color-banded stockings, the youngest team of Nats ever to open a pennant race will take the field.

The accent-on-youth theme of the Washington club discloses an all-rookie outfield, and infield with only one established regular, First Baseman Mickey Vernon. The Nats are generally consigned to the second-division in preseason polls.

They will be meeting in the Yankees the same club that breezed to the 1947 pennant, bolstered at this time by the return of slugging Charley Keller to the outfield that, as usual, also numbers Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich.

In only one particular is there a change in the veteran Yankee lineup. Harris has nominated as his catcher today, Gus Niarhos, late of Kansas City, in an emergency caused by the injury to Yogi Berra.

Around the infield, the Yankees will present the veterans George McQuinn at first base; George

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BASEBALL PUTS ON THE DOG today, with the Army Band going into flourishes and ruffles, the President of the United States trying to look like a fan, the Speaker of the House heading the march to the flagpole and Congressmen and Senators playing truant from the council halls. It could happen only in Washington.

POVICH

These Washington openers are something apart. Here the opening game becomes a production. In other cities in the big leagues they don't get the same effects. In Cleveland, Boston and New York, mere mayors or borough presidents are herded into the arena for the opening pitch. Scrubby-uniformed tootlers, mere mercenaries who got a job for the day, make the music in the outland parks. The Washington opener commands the stiff-backed musicians of the marching military. The Washington opener is no mere opener—it's an inaugural.

Only the brashest President of the United States, or one deep in war strategy, passes up the Washington inaugural. In an election year, it's virtually mandatory that he show. Presidential candidates like to be of the people in a ballot year, and baseball is the perfect medium. The late Calvin Coolidge used to stifle his dislike for the game to accompany his White House advisers to the opener as good public relations.

THE PRESIDENTS HAVE been going to the Washington baseball openers ever since William Howard Taft set the style in 1910. Clark Griffith started his annual spring treks to the White House in 1912, to present Taft with the first gold pass of American League games in a ceremony that has been a Griffith White House fixture ever since. Later, there was a purse for the First Lady, containing her individual gold pass.

Not until Ford Frick, a former newspaperman with an appreciation for good public relations, became president of the National League, did the presentation of gold passes to the Chief Executive become a two-league ceremony. Frick muscled the National League into Griffith's exclusive American League publicity racket about eight years ago, despite the fact the White House is in an American League town.

President Taft needed no urging to go to ball games, however. He used to play baseball at Yale, and was natively a fan. He didn't limit his presence to the openers. He was there that day in July, 1912, to welcome back a Washington team that had just won 16 straight in the West, rooting like a rabid Washington partisan in contrast to the aloof neutrality of later Presidents.

TAFT'S SUCCESSOR, President Wilson, was an avid fan in 1913-14, before European war clouds gathered. He disdained the presidential box seat, and waited for no invitation and heavy preparations for his attendance. He drove into the park in his chauffeured brougham, parked it in right field before it was cluttered with the present bleachers, and watched the game from an open window in his car. Clark Griffith used to station a reserve catcher, with mitt, on the running board to intercept any foul balls in that direction, lest there be a presidential casualty.

The Presidents, as a rule, were pretty good fans. Warren Harding was probably the best. He used to own a minor league club in Marion, Ohio, and knew the game. He wasn't above betting a "fin," either. He kept a complete scorecard, in approved style, and on one day at least he made a losing bet because his scorecard, picked up at the end of the game by a park employe bore the notation "Owe George $5."

The fan of the Coolidge family, though, was Mrs. Coolidge. She often saw ball games, unaccompanied by the President. When it rained during the 1924 World Series, and President Coolidge gruffly quit the whole business in the fourth inning, Mrs. Coolidge stayed on smilingly to the finish.

HERBERT HOOVER wasn't the most avid of the presidential fans, but at least he abided the business of going to ball games. He holds the record of being the only President ever booed by a baseball crowd. That wasn't in Washington, however. At Philadelphia during the 1930 World Series, he got it, to the chant of "We Want Beer!" in that era of prohibition.

If Franklin Roosevelt didn't like baseball, you couldn't tell it. He wore the widest grin of any Chief Executive and was the best presidential copy for the baseball writers. He bantered with photographers in the opening pitch ceremonies, and his double-fist, fighter's handshake raised high over his head put him in strong with the fans.

President Truman hasn't waited for another opener to roll around before he goes to the ball park. He has made surprise appearances in midseason, though they do say Mrs. Truman and Margaret are better fans. But Mr. Truman looks like he likes it, and that's important, particularly in an election year.

62,369 See Bums Whip Yanks, 5-3

New York, April 18 (AP).—A record, preseason throng of 62,369 at Yankee Stadium saw the Brooklyn Dodgers whip the New York Yankees 5-3, today and win the training series between the two teams, 2-1.

A trio of Dodger hurlers, Jack Banta, Dwain Sloat and Harry Taylor, limited the Bronx Bombers to three hits, only one coming after the first frame.

Peewee Reese won the game in the fifth with a two-run homer off Red Embree. Embree gave up all five Brooklyn runs in his five inning stint.

Two walks, a two-bagger by Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio's base-clearing double gave the Yanks all their tallies in the first frame.

Braves 3-2 Victors

Boston, April 18 (AP).—With Lefty Warren Spahn in mid-season form, the Boston Braves gained a 3-2 win over the Red Sox in the fifth and final game of their city series before a 26,663 cold-braving crowd today at Fenway Park.

The tribal portside act held the American Leaguers to seven scattered hits, three of them by Dom DiMaggio, and he launched the victory surge by opening the third inning with a single.

The win was the Braves' second of the series and their first here. Today's turnout boosted the three Boston games' attendance total to 55,634.

The Tiger victory evened the two-game exhibition series at a game apiece. Held to a single hit for the first eight innings, the Tigers erupted in the ninth for a single and double.

Chicago, April 18 (U.P.).—The Cubs trounced the White Sox, 9 to 2, before a crowd of 24,229 today and ended the annual spring City Series even with their cross-town rivals at five victories each.

Bill Wight, obtained by the White Sox from the Yankees in the deal for Ed Lopat, injured his pitching elbow during a four-run fourth inning uprising and had to retire. It was not regarded as too serious after preliminary examination.

Gerry Scala, White Sox outfielder, suffered a two-inch cut on his foot because of a collision with Bob Kennedy. Both probably will miss the opening series.

Four Games on Three Fronts Launch Major Leagues Today

By Joe Reichler

New York, April 18 (AP).—The 1948 major league baseball season, which opens on three fronts tomorrow, promises to develop into the most exciting in many years.

Preseason ticket reservations totaling more than 4 million dollars and the richest rookie crop since before the war form the basis for this great optimism.

Interest also has been stimulated by numerous player trades and sales, the return of such colorful figures as Leo Durocher and Joe McCarthy, several managerial changes, and the investments in clubs by such figures as former Postmaster General Bob Dannegan and Hank Greenberg.

With few exceptions, the clubs are stronger and more hopeful than last year. And for the first time in a long while, the two league races shape up almost as close as Presidents Ford Frick (National) and Will Harridge predict.

May Draw 20 Million

A record 20 million attendance this year is more than a possibility.

Nearly 125,000 fans are expected to witness the four games tomorrow which mark the home inaugurals of three clubs.

The Boston Red Sox, who are expected to be the defending New York Yankees' biggest obstacle for another American League pennant, will get the jump on the other clubs by engaging the Philadelphia Athletics in a morning-afternoon doubleheader to celebrate Patriot's Day in Boston.

Dobson vs. Marchildon

Some 25,000 morning patrons are expected to see curley-haired Joe Dobson, Boston's biggest winner last year, face Phil Marchildon, who won 19 games for the A's in 1947.

The second contest will start at 3:15 with Boston's Denny Galehouse or Jack Kramer opposing Lou Brissie, Connie Mack's husky rookie righthander. Sox officials predict a turnout of 35,000 for the afternoon tilt.

A crowd of 33,000, including President Harry S. Truman, is expected to watch Washington and the Yankees open their season at the Capital City.

The firing becomes general on Tuesday when every club with the exception of the Red Sox and the Athletics swing into action. The latter two will be resting from their holiday labors.

National League—Brooklyn at New York, Boston at Philadelphia, Chicago at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati at St. Louis.

American League—New York at Washington, Detroit at Chicago, St. Louis at Cleveland, only games scheduled.

Dumont television station WTTG will begin showing opening-game ceremonies over Channel 5 at 2:30 p. m. with Bob Wolff and Howard Williams handling the narrative.

After opening game, Nats' day games will be broadcast by WPIK and WWDC-FM. Night and Sunday games will be broadcast over WWDC (1450) and WWDC-FM. WTTG will televise all Nats' home games.

Vogel Favorite Today in Boston Marathon Race

Boston, Apuril 18 (AP).—National Champion Ted Vogel of Tufts College is expected to have an easy romp into an Olympic team berth tomorrow when he competes in the fifty-second Boston A.A. marathon.

Only a half dozen in the international field of 193, which includes four former winners, appeared capable of challenging that collegian over the hilly 26 miles, 385 yards from Little Hopkinton to this city's Back Bay district.

A year ago the 25-year-old Vogel, an able competitor from a mile up, was the first homebred to finish as Yun Bok Suh of Korea lowered the course record to 2 hours 25 minutes 39 seconds.

Suh has not returned and neither has Finland's Mikko Hietanen, the only other to finish ahead of Vogel in the 1947 B.A.A. "grind." After gaining his third-place here, Vogel practically clinched an Olympic assignment by winning the National marathon title at Yonkers, N. Y.

Among those who menace Vogel are Tom Crane of Springfield, who was the Yonkers race runner-up; Jesse Van Zandt, a 25-year-old Costa Rican now living in San Francisco; Lou Gregory of New York; Dave Mazzeo of Rockland, Me., who finished eighth last year.

Worsham's 198 Wins 'Specialists'

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Virginia Beach, Va., April 18 (AP). Smiling Lew Worsham, who hasn't finished on top very often since he won the National Open Golf championship last summer, broke his string of bad luck as completely as he broke par today to win the Cavalier "Specialists" Tournament.

Worsham, a Tidewater Virginia native, compiled a a 54-hole total of 198 with two rounds of 65, four under par, today after an opening 68 last Friday. The victory, his first since the Denver Open last fall, added $1000 to Worsham's links earnings.

Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., who also broke par of 69 for all his three rounds over the windswept, 6065-yard course, took the $900 second money with a 202 total.

Sarazen's Putter Fails

Gene Carazen, the first-day leader with a record equalling 63, couldn't make his putter behave today and wound up with a 205 total. He finished in a three-way tie for the other big prize money with Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, and Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kans.

These three collected $700 apiece. All the other contestants in the limited field for this unique event collected $500 apiece for their part in Saturday's specialists team match.

Only 15 players started in the medal play tournament, which was limited to men chosen for the team contest because of their ability to execute certain types of shots.

Like most of the others, Worsham got into trouble a couple of times today largely because of the biting cold which blew across the course. But Lew made up for that with what he called "tthe best putting of my career." Throughout both rounds he was consistently sinking the 6, 8 and 10-foot putts for his birdies and he downed one of 20 feet on the eighth hole of his final round.

Lew Hooks on Fifth

His worst troubles on the last 18 came on the fifth hole, where he hooked his drive but made a nice recovery and putt to get his par, and on the fifteenth. There Lew's drive landed behind a tree and then he three-putted for the only time.

Nats Beaten Again, 9-7, By Baltimore

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., April 18.—In the final tuneup for their major league opener against the World Champion New York Yankees tomorrow, the Nats got licked, 9-7, by the minor league Baltimore Orioles today.

The Orioles won without even working up a sweat—it was too cold, Washington's pride might have been punctured by the second straight loss to the International Leaguers, but its treasury was inflated. The turnout of 7803 was the largest to see the Nats perform his spring.

It was a one-sided affair for 8 2/3 innings. Trailing 9-4 at that juncture, the Nats threatened to upset their tormentors, but the rally fell short.

Eddie Yost pumped a three-run homer high into the left field stands, 290 feet distant. Al Kozar and Gil Coan kept the spree going by getting on base on an error and a double, respectively.

Levy Snuffs Uprising

With the tieing runs on second and third, Mickey Vernon slapped a fierce bounder down the first base line which Ed Levy speared and the Nats were beaten—again.

Although they were outhit, 14-9, the Orioles got more mileage out of their safeties. They needed only three, for instance, in their big second inning when they scored five runs.

A low throw on a force play by Shortstop Mark Christman opened the gates for the Birds. Four of those five tallies were unearned. Centerfielder Bill Martin swatted the mightiest blow of that demonstration, a lusty triple to deep right field which drove in three runs.

It was done at the expense of Walter Masterson, who went out in favor of Chic Pieretti after another inning. Pieretti yielded one run in the two innings he pitched and his successor, young Dick Welteroth, was touched for three more in his three innings.

Eighteen-year-old George Anderman, a left-hander, making his debut in pro ball, had the Nats pretty well in check for five innings, but the Washingtonians ganged up and drove him to cover in the sixth.

Johnny Podajny relieved him after the Nats had scored twice and promptly pitched himself in and out of a hole.

Yost teased an infield single out of hi mand Kozar walked to load the bases, Al Evans being already on with a single. But both Coan and Vernon lofted to the infield and the Nat scoring was done until the ninth.

3 Area Clubs Score State 4-Ball Sweeps

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Three Washington area golf clubs placed two teams each in the second round of the Maryland State four-ball championships by scoring victories yesterday at Manor and Hillendale Country Clubs.

Indian Springs, Washington Golf and Country Club and Columbia Country Club each scored double victories, while Manor and Prince Georges each won one match and lost one.

Only Washington club to be eliminated from the four-ball second round was Kenwood, which had both its two-man teams ousted yesterday.

Columbia Hard Pressed

Most decisive victories for area entries were scored by the two Washington Golf and Country Club teams. In the upper half match at Manor, Harold Hair and Eddie Steptoe walloped their Catoctin rivals, 5 and 4, while at Hillendale, Washington's other team, Claude Rippey and Jim Gardner, scored a crushing 6 and 5 victory over a Suburban Country Club pair.

Both Columbia teams scored hard-fought 1-up triumphs, while Indian Spring's Buddy Sharkey-Eddie Ault and Jim Hunt-W. McFerran combinations rolled over their opponents by identical 4-and-3 scores.

Biggest upset of the opening day's play was the victory of Eddie Meyer and S. J. Schwinn of the Country Club of Maryland over Maryland Open Champion Spencer Overton and Stewart Foxwell of Rolling Road, 4 and 3.

The eight surviving Baltimore and Washington teams in each bracket will play their second rounds next Sunday at Rolling Road.

Stevens' 4-Bagger Clinches It

St. Louis, April 18 (AP).—Jerry Priddy and Chuck Stevens hit home runs—the latter with Bob Dillinger on base—to give the St. Louis Browns a 3 to 1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

It evened the count in the two-game city series since the Redbirds won the first game yesterday, 8-6, in 15 innings.

Priddy opened the scoring in the first frame with two men out. Stevens then brought in what proved to be the margin of victory in the third inning with a blow over the right field pavilion.

The Cards' lone score came in the fourth when Enos Slaughter got the first hit off Nelson Potter—a single. Joe Garagiola then stepped up and doubled to right field, scoring Slaughter.

The National club team threatened again in the eighth, but with one out, Whitey Kurowski flied to Al Zarilla and the Brownie right fielder pegged the ball to the plate to cut down Red Schoendienst who tried to score from third.

Reds Rout Chiefs

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds closed their 1948 exhibition season today with a 21-1 trouncing of the Syracuse Chiefs before 5587 Crosley Field fans.

Frankie Baumholtz, Manager Johnny Neun's much improved right fielder, rapped two singles and a triple in three times at bat, and former Philly Johnny Wyrostek got three doubles in five trips. It was the Reds fourth consecutive victory over Syracuse.

Indians Wallop Giants

Cleveland, April 18 (AP). — Joe Gordon's three-run homer in the eighth inning closed the Cleveland Indians' exhibition slate today with a 13-2 trouncing of the New York Giants before 16,297 fans in Lakefront Stadium.

Bob Lemon, ace Tribe right-hander, limited the power-packed National Leaguers to two runs and eight hits in eight innings of hurling and also rapped a home run to help his cause.

York's Hit Wins

Philadelphia, April 18 (AP).—Pinch Hitter Rudy York won his first game for the Philadelphia Athletics today, rapping in the deciding run in the ninth inning in a 3-2 game with the Philadelphia Phils. The win gave the A's an even split in the annual city series. Each team won one game in Florida and each won once at Shibe Park in the weekend games.

She Rolls 426 Set

D. C. Woman Sets National Duckpin Pace

New Haven, Conn., April 18 (AP). Betty Bainbridge of Washington, D. C., led a bevy of District of Columbia bowlers tonight in assaults on the leaders in the eighteenth annual tournament of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress by posting a 426 set to take over the leadership in the women's singles.

Miss Bainbridge's score was only two pins short of the tournament record, which was set by Edna Hughes of Norfolk, Va., in 1942. The new leader shoved Alice D'Lugo McHugh of Fairfield, leader for more than a week, back into second place.

Washington also produced a new leader in the men's doubles when Don Cost and Frank Micalizzi posted a joint 808 to oust Harry Peters of Bristol and Nick Tronsky of New Britain from the lead.

Hokie Smith of Washington produced the only major change in the men's singles by taking over second place with a 441 set. Tronsky rolled into third place in the all events with a 1202.

Lucy Rose of Washington rolled a triple set of 1090 to replace Elaine Fallat of Bridgeport as the women's all-events leader.

Evelyn Nickel and Emma Bourne of Washington took second place in the women's doubles with a set of 760, seven pins behind the leaders, Ida Simmons and Emma Williams of Norfolk, Va.

Red Gaddis Fights Tonight

Red Gaddis, 18-year-old local lightweight, gets the featured spot against Henry Lassain of Houston, Tex. In other eights, Washington's Kid Willie meets Welterweight Terry Gibson of Los Angeles, and Washington's Johnny Arduini faces Bantamweight Lew Yonkers of Roanoke.

Gaddis goes into his bout with a record of six straight victories. Lassain, victor over the rising Sonny Boy West, started this year's campaign with a mark of only five setbacks in 29 fights.

In other bouts, Johnny Hansbury tangles with Jerome Pratt in a five-rounder, and Al Harris boxes Angelo Marino in a four-rounder starting at 8:45.

Milwaukee Player Hit, Cut by Bat

Toledo, Ohio, April 18 (AP).—Norm Schlueter, Milwaukee Brewers' catcher who formerly played with the Cleveland Indians in the American League, suffered a head cut today when he was struck by a swinging bat in the seventh inning of an American Association doubleheader opening game.

Schlueter, who stepped too close to the bat of Toledo Third Baseman Don Richmond, was carried from the field on a stretcher and rushed to a local hospital. His condition later was reported "not serious" by hospital officials.

Highs Play 46 Games This Week

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Two nonleague baseball games share the spotlight with four Friday interhigh tilts on this week's schoolboy agenda. Forty-six baseball games, 11 golf matches, 9 tennis matches, 5 track meets and a lacrosse game make up the six day card.

The first important baseball game of the week occurs Tuesday when Mount Vernon and George Washington clash in their first of two meetings this season for the high school championship of Alexandria.

G. W. Won Twice in '47

Last year, G. W. defeated Mount Vernon two out of three times and went on to the State title. But Mount Vernon rooters this year have made such an issue of their one win last year, that the G. W. team has set out to win both 1948 meetings by heavy scores. It's a real grudge game.

So far this year, G. W. has won 3 and lost 1. Mount Vernon has won 6 straight.

Eastern Favored

On its winning performance against Coolidge last Friday, Eastern now rates top choice to win the Washington interhigh championship. And on its six-game winning streak, Mount Vernon is favored to take the Alexandria crown. The team that wins this game can make a fair claim to being the best in the metropolitan area.

An odd twist to Friday's interhigh league schedule is that all four games find a winner in last week's openers playing a loser. Central plays at Western, Calvin Coolidge at McKinley Tech, Roosevelt at Woodrow Wilson and Eastern at Anacosta. Central, Tech, Wilson and Eastern all won last Friday and all but Tech figure to win again.

Cotton Wins Greenbrier

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 18 (U.P.).—Henry Cotton, the veteran British pro who was supposed to be nearing the end of his golfing days, came up with his first tournament victory in the United States today when he shot a par 70 to win the $7500 Greenbrier Amateur-Professional with a 136 for the two rounds.

He beat 12 United States pro stars for first place in the professional ranks and tied for top position in the amateur-pro competition. He picked up a total of $1800 in prize money.

One stroke behind was A. J. (Dutch) Harrison, who came in with the best round of the tournament, a 5-under-par 65, today.

Yank Chess Star Defeats Russian

Moscow, April 18 (AP).—Samuel Reshevsky of New York defeated the Russian master, Mikhail Botvinnik, today to move into a second place tie in the world's championship chess tournament.

It was the first defeat in 14 rounds for Botvinnik, who still leads the field with eight points out of 11 games. Reshevsky, who was sidelined with a bad cold early last week, is tied with Paul Keres of Russia. Each has 5½ points in 10 games. The American has a chance to gain undisputed possession of second place when he meets Keres tomorrow.

Suffolk Downs Opens Racing

Boston, April 18 (AP).—With 1052 thoroughbreds stabled on its grounds, the Suffolk Downs race track will open a 42-day spring meeting tomorrow with the $5000 Damon Runyon Purse as its inaugural feature.

Ten sprinters, including a pair of entries, are down to start in that six-furlongs dash for four-year-olds and up. Most of the overnight entries are familiar to New England racing fans.

VA Reduces Job-Training Supervision

By The Associated Press

The Veterans Administration relieved its training officers yesterday of responsibility for direct supervision of able-bodied war veterans in job-training or special studies.

The American Legion immediately protested the action, declaring it would "wreck the program."

A spokesman for the Veterans Administration said the decision resulted from a personnel reduction now under way to meet budget limitations for the next fiscal year.

The reduced number of training officers will be sufficient only to attend to the needs of disabled veterans in training under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, he said. No statistical estimate of the number of training officers and the extent of reduction of the training force was available.

The law gives the Veterans Administration full responsibility for the training of disabled veterans, the spokesman said. However, he added, it makes State approving agencies responsible for certifying and inspecting schools and training establishments attended by able-bodied veterans who study under the so-called GI Bill of Rights.

Resolutions Left Pending By Amvets

Resolutions which were not acted upon at the Amvets convention here through lack of time will be considered by each post's delegates separately, it was decided yesterday.

A crowded agenda at Saturday's final session of the convention prevented action on about a dozen resolutions. They were to have been considered yesterday at a special meeting at the Amvets Club, but a quorum of delegates failed to appear.

Among the resolutions is one which calls for abolition of Veterans Administration branch offices, turning their functions over to regional offices.

Another asks Congress to restore a secondary mortgage market for veterans' home loans without recourse, either by reactivating the RFC mortgage company or by authorizing the VA to purchase certain loans which do not exceed $10,000 each.

An Amvet spokesman said the resolutions would be acted upon by convention delegates at individual post meetings. The total for the District's 17 Amvet posts will then be tabulated, with a majority required to affirm the resolutions.

Railroads' Supplies Cost $1.9 Billions Last Year

The Class I railroads yesterday reported an unprecedented outlay of $1,909,209,000 for operating fuel, materials and supplies in 1947.

The Association of American Railroads released the figures, describing them as a record. The increase was attributed mainly to higher prices for fuels, forest products, iron and steel.

New Jet Fighter Contract Awarded

The Air Force yesterday awarded a $1,500,000 engineering and tooling contract for a new jet fighter plane to Curtiss-Wright Corporation, Columbus, Ohio.

The plane will be a four-engine, 600-mile-an-hour all-weather jet fighter, the XP-87. The first model has undergone some successful tests at Muroc Air Base, Calif.

BIG JOB for Earnings

...meeting your

BIG and GROWING NEED for Oil!

The better you live, the more oil you need.

Today—3 million more cars are on the road than pre-war. 1,500,000 more homes have oil heat. Five times as many diesel locomotives now. Twice as many farm tractors and trucks.

But*—this rising need for oil can be met only by modernizing and expanding on a big scale—and in a hurry in spite of today's high costs.

To do this job, Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) and its affiliates are spending one billion dollars in 1947 and 1948 alone—for new wells, plants, tankers, pipelines, storage tanks, and all the other things it takes to get you the oil you need.

That billion dollars is money that goes back into the business from earnings, past and current.

In 1947, for instance, we put 426 million dollars into replacements and expansion. To do this, we:

(1) used all funds set aside to replace worn-out equipment;

(2) ploughed back well over half the year's profits—all that was left after paying dividends; and

(3) dipped heavily into savings put aside in years past to help meet just such needs as we face today.

In the seven years 1940 through 1946, we spent well over one billion dollars for needed equipment, mostly for war needs. Now, in just two years, we are spending another billion dollars. This money comes from the business itself. Money made on the job goes back into the job.

Profits we reinvest for needed production facilities work for everybody. They pay for the capital investment that we must make today to get you the oil you need tomorrow.

Restored Budget Cuts to Save Many Jobs in Commerce

COMMERCE is revising its lay-off plans. The Senate Appropriations Committee has restored some of the cuts in its budget voted a few weeks ago by the House. It proposed:

That the Technical and Scientific Service be given $200,000. The House refused to provide this agency with a penny of the $520,000 requested. The committee action would save the jobs of about 60 in the 140-man agency.

That the Census Bureau be given $1,724,000 more than was allowed by the House for current statistics. This would save the jobs of several hundred employes.

That the foreign trade statistical unit be kept in Census instead of being transferred to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce as proposed by the House;

That the Patent Office be given $350,000 of the $950,000 House cut. This money could be used to hire a few additional employes, and to provide a more liberal promotion system for patent examinations;

That the Weather Bureau be given $500,000 of its $2,003,000 House cut. This money would be used to hire additional people;

That the Bureau of Standards be given $350,000 of a $855,000 House cut for research and testing, and that the Secretary's office be given $50,000 additional.

No additional funds were given Civil Aeronautics Administration, Civil Aeronautics Board, and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

FCC: It's reported on good authority that Commissioner Clifford Durr can have reappointment to the Federal Communications Commission if he wishes it. But, the story goes, he has declined the honor with thanks. Durr is outspoken in his criticism of the President's Federal worker loyalty program.

CAPITOL HILL: In the legislative branch are 106 employes whose salaries are now $10,000 a year. The average increase given Capitol Hill employes is much greater than that given other Federal workers since 1940.

SCIENCE SURVEY: An inventory is being made of the 50,000 natural and physical scientists in this country who hold doctor's degrees. It's being conducted by the National Research Council on contract from the Army and Navy.

The survey is being speeded up with the talk of another war. The military is anxious to know who are our top scientists, where they are, and what they can do. Science and scientific knowledge is a first line of defense and the military recognizes it as such.

But the inventory has brought forth uneasy reactions from many of the scientists. These scientists resent the way Dr. Edward U. Condon of the Bureau of Standards has been treated by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. They resist Federal service because of the fear that they, too, will be held up to public ridicule and their reputations damaged by a congressional committee which would refuse to give them a chance to defend themselves.

JOBS: An exam for guards to pay salaries ranging from $2020 to $2805 a year to start is now at Civil Service. The jobs are at the Naval Gun Factory and other naval establishments here and nearby. Only veterans may apply for the jobs . . . Civil Service soon will announce an exam for social workers. Starting salaries from $2644 to $4149 a year. The jobs are open in the District government and in Federal hospitals here . . . Medical technical assistant is another test to be open soon. Salaries from $2394 to $3397. The jobs are in Federal prison hospitals and the Public Health Service.

NOTES: Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) has in a bill to create 10 $15,000 professional and scientific jobs in Commerce, and six more in the military agencies . . . A total of 344 persons were given eligible ratings on the recent geologist exam. About the same number flunked out . . . The library of the old Office of Government Reports is to be transferred to another Federal agency. Congress refused to extend it beyond June 30 . . . The Senate Labor Committee has reported out a new national science foundation bill. The President last year reluctantly vetoed a science bill because of the peculiar Administration provided by it.

REVENUE: It's now officially estimated that last year's forced lay-off of 4029 Internal Revenue enforcement officers cost the Government $541,102,758 in potential tax collections for this fiscal year. The estimate was made by Commissioner George Schoeneman when testifying before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

To put it another way, for every dollar these fired employes would have cost the Government, more than $20 would have been added to Federal tax collections. The House Appropriations Committee forced the lay-offs on the contention that it would be "economy" to save the 20-million-dollar in salaries paid the fired employes. Is that economy?

RETIREMENT: Representative George Miller (D., Calif.) has offered a bill to allow any Federal worker to retire on a small annuity at 55 after five years of service. He says his bill would restore to Federal workers a benefit they enjoyed before the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act became effective.

Miller explains that under the new law a widow may receive a pension, if she has a dependent child, immediately on her husband's death, and it will continue until she dies or remarries. He adds that she may have a substantial income.

"But under the same law," Miller explains, "a woman who has worked for the Government for 15, 20 years or even more, cannot derive any sort of annuity until she has reached the age of 62—which seems a manifest injustice. She may be a widow, and she may have dependent children, but it makes no difference."

Sneak Thief Makes Haul Of $550 as Victims Sleep

Entrance Effected Through Unlocked Window; Other Thefts Reported

A soft-shoed burglar yesterday stole approximately $450 in cash and articles valued at more than another $100 from the home of Hirsh de La Viez, 3043 Military rd. nw., while the family slept.

Mrs. de La Viez said the thief entered through an unlocked first-floor window, came upstairs into the bedroom where she and her husband were asleep, and took a gold money clip, containing $392 in cash, a billfold, cigarette lighter, pen and pencil set and car keys from the pockets of her husband's trousers.

The housebreaker also took an alligator pocketbook, valued at $175, another purse, containing $25 in cash, a compact and cigarette lighter from the night table. He then entered the bedroom of her son Robert, 18, and took his billfold, containing $28 in cash, while he slept.

Awakened, Sees No One

Mrs. de la Viez said she was awakened by a slight noise about 4:30 a. m. and looke dout in the hallway, but saw no one. Her husband owns the Hirsh Coin Machine Co.

Other thefts reported yesterday to police included:

Arnett N. Hilliard of 456 Massachusetts ave. nw., reported he missed a wallet, containing $180 in cash, shortly after a teen-age boy came to his apartment and asked if he wanted his windows washed.

Charged in Housebreakings

The two were booked as Gene Cornelius Lipscomb, 19, of 218 12th pl. ne., and Jack Robert Jones, 19, of 219 Tennessee ave. ne. Both are on parole from the National Training School for Boys, police said.

Both were picked up for questioning after Lloyd Cox, 17, of 1731 B st. se., reported they assaulted him Thursday night while he was walking in the 1300 block of East Capitol st.

During questioning about the assault Friday, they broke down and confessed to the housebreakings, police said. Most of the thefts took place in the evening, when they found a family was not at home after they knocked at the door.

Police said they recovered a strongbox, containing about $1000 in loot, in the home of a girl friend of one of the boys. A later check showed that about $1000 in cash was also taken in the housebreakings, according to police.

In addition a juvenile has been implicated in two of the housebreakings but has not yet been charged, police said.

Reorganization Conference Scheduled

Richmond, Va., April 18 (AP).—The job of putting into effect the State governmental reorganization program enacted by the recent General Assembly will be tackled Monday at a conference in Governor Tuck's office.

Legislation reducing the number of State agencies and departments from 70-odd to about 30 goes into effect officially July 1, but a lot of additional planning and issuing of orders and appointments by the Governor must be done to achieve a smooth transformation from the old setup to the new.

Present for the discussion with Governor Tuck will be former United States Senator Thomas G. Burch, of Martinsville, chairman of the study commission which prepared the organization program; State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett, who served as secretary of the commission, and J. H. Bradford, State budget and personnel director.

Takoma Park Nominations Due Tonight

Nominations for the posts of mayor and seven council seats will be made at a Takoma Park town caucus tonight at 8 in the City Firehouse, Carroll and Denwood aves.

Montgomery County Commissioner Oliver W. Youngblood, who has been mayor for the past eight years, has announced he will not seek reelection. Luke J. Bennett, president of the Takoma Park Community League, and Councilman John J. Post have declared their candidacy for the position.

The mayoralty race will be the first in the past six years, since Mayor Youngblood has been unopposed in the past three elections. A contest is also anticipated in the election of councilmen.

The term of office for the mayoralty and council posts is two years. The election will be held May 3.

GI Home Building Fraud Defendants Released on Bail

The defendants are building Inspector Raphael Fratt and three officers of the Man and Camp Construction Co., Inc.—Nick Campitelli, president, Mrs. Amelia Campitelli, secretary, and Mrs. Anna Mancini, treasurer.

Three other city officials, accused in previous grand jury presentments, also were charged. They are Herman F. Lucke, jr., former buildings engineer, now parks engineer; and Frank G. Diver and Milton B. Malan, building inspectors.

Maryland Health Dept. to Confer

Baltimore, April 18 (AP).—The State Health Department will hold its annual conference here May 6 and 7.

The speakers' list includes Dr. Ernest L. Stebbins, director of the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health; Dr. William J. French, deputy State health officer of Anne Arundel County; Dr. Edward J. Stieglitz of Washington; Dr. W. W. Peter, chief of the training section, health and sanitation division, Institute of Inter-American Affairs; Dr. Clarence A. Valet, United States Public Health Service.

Roustabouts tugged heavy 50 foot poles through angle-deep sawdust and pulled them upright. Trapeze artists, dugaree-clad, shinnied up them to rig their perches. Everywhere was confusion, shouting.

Out back, four-ton Indian elephants noisly rolling their huge heads nervously to and fro. Lions and tigers paced their cages, now and then pausing to stare balefully through the bars.

The circus had come to town—stopping at Uline Arena. Today, at 8:15 p. m., the band will blare out the beginning of the opening performance of the largest Shrine circus ever to hit the District.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo and chairman of the circus acts committee, was on hand yesterday to study the show's array of animal talent. He also found time to chat with Lalage, daring feminine aerialist and one of the top attractions, who strolled in for a look at the menagerie.

Not far away, pretty, 16-year-old Dolores Torelli was keeping an eye on half a dozen active Shetland and Welsh ponies. Born in a circus tent, Dolores has been with ponies and trained dogs since she was 3 months old.

Capt. Roy Bush's three Indian elephants, Jewel, Dolly and Blanche, captivated the children who wandered in. Bush put them through a few tricks, much to the kid's delight.

The circus, the seventh put on by Shriners here, will offer matinees Tuesday through Sunday at 2:15 p. m. and evening performances at 8:15 today through Sunday.

Proceeds will go to the Almas Charities and Activities fund and the Crippled Children's hospitals of North America. Tickets, priced at $1.20, $1.80, $2.40, and $3, are on sale at Uline Arena, 3d and M sts. ne,. and Almas Temple, 1315 K st. nw.

Junk Heap Takes Auto's Shape In Veteran's Hands, and Runs

Kenneth J. Wolfe polishes up his homemade car

An enterprising Silver Spring, Md., veteran who bypassed the automobile shortage and built himself a car is today the proud owner of a designer's dream—or nightmare.

"But it runs," declares Kenneth J. Wolfe, 28-year-old former Army Transport Command flier, adding a little bitterly: "It ought to."

Two years of hard work, plus skill and ingenuity, not to mention numerous trips to the junk yard for parts, led to the unorthodox finished product.

"I didn't do it all myself," explained Wolfe, who is employed as a body man at Rockmont Motor Co. in Rockville. "It was a sort of joint effort by all the mechanics at the garage." For more nights than he cares to remember, Wolfe worked until midnight on his project.

He's also very grateful to his boss, Frank Williams, who let him use the shop and equipment to create the mongrel vehicle, as he terms it.

Starting point was a 1935 Dodge sedan he bought for $64.50. "It took us 45 minutes to cut the body off with a cutting torch and two years to put it back on," he said. The engine is by Dodge, vintage of 1941.

The front fenders, now painted a "1948 Ford tan," consist of 24 inches of 1942 Chevrolet, plus a considerable length of black iron shaped by hand. The hood, divided by a ventilator into two parts, is from a 1937 Chrysler. The doors are hand made, but hang on hinge posts from the original he started with.

The rear deck, on the other hand, harks back to a 1938 Oldsmobile, while rear fenders and side pieces are of forgotten ancestry. She body is painted green.

Wolfe had to cut the top of the car 28 different ways, he said, to fit a 1937 Chevrolet headpiece on the different-sized body. The tops of the doors had to be similarly cut to fit the shape.

How much did the car cost? "More than you might think," the creator replied. "I've got at least $1200 in that car, but it was put in a nickel and a dime at a time." He was offered $1500 for it, he disclosed.

The creator looked over his labor of love yesterday at his family's home, 609 Mississippi ave., Silver Spring, with mixed emotions. "Only reason I built it was to see if it could be done," he said. "You know how it is, you get an idea and just follow it through."

The mongrel, which Wolfe jokingly says is a "Heinz" sport coupe—57 varieties—passed the inspection for the District license he obtained wit honly one adjustment, a slight lowering of the headlights. It's officially listed as a Dodge sport coupe, under the original body number, with affidavits to show he built it.

Explosion Burns 3 Workmen at Dupont Laundry

Walls Damaged, Street Roped Off; Gases Believed Ignited by Spark

An explosion in a rear boiler room pit of the Dupont Laundry Co., 2535 Sherman ave. nw., injured three employes yesterday and did considerable damage to the rear of the building.

Two victims of the blast, which was apparently set off by a spark from an electric pump igniting unidentified gases, were admitted to Freedmen's Hospital with first, second and third degree burns. They were cleaning out the pit at the time.

They are George Genus, 48, Landover, Md., in fair condition with first, second and third degree burns to his face, arms and back, and Clarence Murphy, 55, of 704 Eastern ave. ne., in similar condition, with burns of face and hands.

The third injured man, Harold Smoot, 34, of 710 Morton st. nw., was treated for burns on his arms. He was cleaning in the boiler room when the explosion blew him about 10 feet toward the rear door, he said. The rear of the plant is on 9th st. near the corner of Euclid st. nw.

The Washington Post

Scene of Dupont Laundry Co. explosion at 9th and Euclid sts. nw. that injured three, blew out windows and two doors and cracked the wall

While the boiler room, the pit and all equipment appeared undamaged by the blast, it caused two cracks in the rear brick wall of the plant, 40 feet from the pit, and another in a side wall, as well as blowing out sections of the 15-foot wooden folding door. Freakishly, the blast pressure blew out only a few of a number of window panes in the door itself and in a wide window above the door. A side window was completely blown out.

Building Inspector Oscar Estep said the rear wall was unsafe and would have to be pulled down, while the damaged side wall would have to be reconstructed. The rear of the building on 9th st. was roped off by police, who closed that section of the street to traffic.

Inspector G. M. Snow of the fire marshal's office said after a preliminary survey he believed a spark from an electric pump motor had ignited fumes in the pit where the explosion occurred. The pit, containing pipes and other mechanical equipment, is under a hot-water tank which was not in use at the time.

The laundry plant, which does not operate on Sundays, has about 80 production employes, according to Robert E. Rice, superintendent, who was unable to estimate the amount of damage.

For Short Week

Firemen Hit New Snag in Hours Battle

The District firemen's 10-year battle for a 60-hour, 5-day week in place of their present 72-hour, 6-day week, has run into a new snag.

As a result of vigorous objections to the bill by Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), the measure may be recommitted to the Senate District Committee for further consideration, despite the fact the committee has already approved the legislation and sent it to the floor for action.

When the bill came up in the Senate last Monday, Ball objected and asked that action on the measure be deferred. This was done, as a matter of parliamentary routine.

Since then Ball has conferred with Senator C. Douglas Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the District Committee.

Agreed to Recall

The chairman has agreed to have the measure recalled, Ball said yesterday, because it was reported out by the committee with "barely a quorum" present. It is felt there should be more discussion of the measure, Ball said.

Ball opposed the bill in committee and objected to action on it in the Senate on the ground that the legislation authorized a change in the fire department that would cost the District about half a million dollars a year at a time when the District government is already short of revenue.

The Commissioners ought to ask Congress for funds to shorten the working hours of the firemen, and also show where that money is to come from, Ball feels, before Congress changes the law that requires firemen to work six days a week.

Until 1919, Washington firefighters were on a 24-hour, 7-days-a-week work schedule. At that time they were put on a double platoon system, averaging 12 hours a day, 7 days a week. Five years later the working week was reduced to six days, or a total of 72 hours a week.

1939 Bill Vetoed

In 1939 Congress approved a 60-hour, 5-day week for the firemen here, but President Roosevelt vetoed the measure. Since then, Firemen's Association No. 36, International Association of Fire Fighters, has been trying to get another law passed.

Under the present system, firemen on night duty work 14 hours for 6 days a week, for a total of 84 hours while those on day duty work 10 hours a day, for a total of 60. The firemen rotate tricks every other week, and average 72 working hours a week.

The proposed change would average a 60-hour week, through a 70-hour work week on the night shift, 50-hour work week on the day shift.

After the House approved the shorter working day and week, the Senate District Committee held further hearings. Chief Murphy and the Commissioners withdrew their objections to the bill, when it was made contingent on the availibility of funds.

Wife Stabbed, Police Accuse Riverdale Man

Stabbed with a butcher-knife wielded, according to police, by her husband, a 38-year-old Riverdale, Md., woman, Mrs. Iris Cates, was in critical condition last night at Leland Memorial Hospital.

The knife-wielding occurred early yesterday at the Cates' home, 6611 Calvert Court, Calvert Houses, in Riverdale. The husband, at Prince Georges General Hospital, was under police guard, after a warrant was sworn out for his arrest on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

According to Georges County Policeman Lee Pumphrey, police had been called to the home shortly before midnight Saturday by Mrs. Cates who said her husband had threatened her. Cates could not be found. Shortly after midnight, after police had left, he returned, Pumphrey said, and stabbed Mrs. Cates in the back, puncturing a lung, with a butcher knife.

The terrified woman, attempting to escape, ran into a plate glass door and was cut by the shattered glass. She was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital by neighbors and several blood transfusions given her.

Cates, who, Pumphrey said, ran from the house after the stabbing, returned after investigating police had left, and slashed his wrists and throat with another butcher knife. The wounded man was taken to the hospital by the Branchville Rescue Squad.

5 Candidates For Delegate Name Choices

Only 5 of 11 Prince Georges County candidates for Republican delegate seats in the Maryland State primary May 3 have definite preference for any of the present GOP presidential aspirants.

A survey of the candidates, seeking seven delegate seats in the Republican State convention, showed yesterday that three favor Governor Dewey as the party's presidential nominee, one likes General MacArthur, and another Senator Taft. Five of the group have no preference, while one is undecided between Dewey and House Speaker Joseph Martin.

Definitely committed to Dewey, provided they are elected, are James T. Sutton of Cedar Heights; J. Bryant Morrison, Capitol Heights, and Lawrence Henry, Bowie. Ervin Hohensee of College Park is "very enthusiastic about MacArthur," while the lone Taft supporter is Ned Waters of Berwyn.

Mrs. Marvin Gallimore, Bladensburg, is undecided between Dewey and Martin, while candidates having no specific preference include W. Leroy Armstrong, Laurel; Sydney Moore, Brandywine; Mrs. Annette Fisher, Cheverly; Paul Johnson, Mount Rainier, and H. Wilson Spicknall, Hyattsville.

Miss Dale Elected

Leesburg, Va., April 18 (Spl.).—Miss Adelaide Dale, supervisor of rural education, has been elected head of the Loudoun Education Association, succeeding Mrs. Wade H. Palmer, who has held the post for two years. The spring session of the association also elected Mrs. Wilda Tucker, Sterling, vice president; Miss Wanda Womeldorph, Lovettsville, secretary, and Everett Remsberg, Round Hill, treasurer.

Bear at Zoo Bows To 45,000 Visitors

Unmistakable symptoms of election year "itch for office" (a very free translation) were observed by 45,000 visitors to the National Zoological Park yesterday.

He rushes out of his cave, bowing deeply at each step. He puts his front paws up on the rocky podium before the entrance. Then he raises one paw in a magnificent sweeping gesture familiar to every campaign audience. Then he bows in all directions. Finally, he backs into his cave, bowing deeply at each step.

Every few moments he repeats the performance. Sunday crowds lent encouragement to this elaborate caricature of a technique more common to another part of the city.

The seals seem worse showoffs than ever, too, but their normal tendencies to exhibitionism are so pronounced it is difficult to tell if election year has made them worse.

The emperor penguins, only a stone's throw from the bear house, are in a state of decline. They stand stuffily silent, gulping occasionally. Experts say they have throat obstructions. It is obvious that they are in the same fix as the spectators outside their cage. It's an election year and they just can't swallow it.

Political overtones of the Zoo did not bother Sunday's mob of samll fry. The usual bedlam prevailed. Ballons, popcorn boxes, confection wrappers and the like covered the ground. The air was filled with the usual shouts of "Ma I want to see the bears!" The salutation alternated between "Ma" and "Pa", and the destination differed, but the tone of the recitation was uniformly sharp, the volume invariably great.

There were many other utterances, such as "Willie, don't let go my hand!" Here and there a small child wept lustily, frightened no doubt by the terrifying injunction on park signs: "Lost Children Go To the Lion House." These however, were only the normal aspects of the Zoo on Sunday.

Police Moving Quarters

Montgomery County Police of the Bethesda substation are to move today into new quarters in the basement of the Bethesda County Building.

The basement has been remodeled to provide a public office, a squad room, a locker room for the men, quarters for the detective bureau, an office for the precinct commander, and two cell rooms. One of the cell rooms will be for men and a smaller one for women.

Quarters on the first floor of the County Building formerly occupied by county police will be taken over by the county commissioners' office.

Robbery Clew Lacking

Fort B elvoir authorities last night were still without a clew as to the identity of two thugs who escaped with about $1200 after slugging a guard accompanying a Post Exchange collector late Friday.

According to the provost marshal's office, neither the guard nor the collector was able to give more than a vague description of the two men who floored the guard as the colelctor was about to place the money in a night depository at the Army post. The attackers fled into the darkness.

Both the Army's Criminal Investigation Division and Virginia State Police are investigating the robbery. Funds taken by the pair repreesnted the day's receipts from the 12 Post Exchange stores at Fort Belvoir.

Cabbie Beats Stork

Cooke, of 1375 Bryant st. ne., was sent by a dispatcher to pick up Mrs. Irene Jones, 24, at her home at 40 Todd pl. ne., and take her to Georgetown Hospital.

When the stork started rushing things along the way, Cooke sent a hurried call to his dispatcher for help. The dispatcher notified police. Police broadcast an alert to all patrol cars along Rhode Island ave. Two motorcycle policemen picked up the cab at Logan Circle and escorted it full speed to the hospital.

They arrived there just in time for Mrs. Jones to give birth to a 3-pound, 13-ounce girl. Mrs. Jones' husband is overseas.

New St. Ann's Church Is Dedicated

The blessing preceded a solemn pontifical mass sung by the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, vicar general of the Washington archdiocese and pastor of St. Gabriel's Church.

Archbishop O'Boyle, in gold miter and cope, carrying a gold crozier (bishop's staff), walked slowly around the edifice, sprinkling it with holy water and pronouncing the blessing. Hundreds of passersby stopped along Wisconsin ave. and Yuma st. to watch the impressive ceremony.

Accompanying the archbishop during the blessing were his deacons of honor—the Right. Revs. Msgr. Edward U. McAdams, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, and Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Blesed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase; the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary, master of ceremonies, and the Rev. Henry D. Collins, pastor of St. Ann's. Monsignor Smyth is a former rector of St. Ann's.

Begins With Procession

The outdoor phase of the service began with a procession from the rectory on Yuma st. to the church steps. The procession was led by a color guard of the Catholic War Veterans, District of Columbia Department. Behind them marched the St. Ann's choir of men and boys, members of the fourth degree, Knights of Columbus, wearing swords and baldrics, and church dignitaries.

Upon reaching the church steps, the choir chanted before the archbishop began his walk around the structure. Before the mass, the archbishop passed up and down the church aisles, blessing the interior.

Parishioners heard the archbishop's sermon from folding chairs, the pews having not yet been installed.

Archbishop O'Boyle paid tribute to Father Collins and other priests of St. Ann's; to the Sisters of Providence, who supervise St. Ann's Parochial School, and to members of the parish in general, for their efforts in building the new church.

He spoke of the new edifice, of thirteenth century Gothic architecture as "a House of God of unsurpassable beauty," and said "the church is the mother of beauty and of truth."

Presides at Mass

Archbishop O'Boyle presided at the mass and officers were the Rev. Joseph Slattery, C. S. P., of the Paulist Fathers, deacon; the Rev. John W. Stafford, C. S. V., of the Victorian Fathers, subdeacon, and the Rev. Timothy N. MacCarthy, pastor of St. Margaret's Church, Seat Pleasant, assistant priest to Bishop McNamara.

The new St. Ann's Church is of limestone and brick construction. Among Washington's oldest parishes, St. Ann's held first services in a frame chapel in Tenleytown Village in 1869. Jesuit priests walked from Georgetown University to celebrate masses.

When the parish was organized, the population of Tenleytown Village was 376. The first resident pastor was the Rev. Ebenezer E. Maynadier, a native of Harford County, Md. From 1869 to 1880, the parish was administered by the Jesuits. In 1902, a church was built on the present site; it was razed to make room for the present building. The parish has nearly 5000 members, according to Father Collins.

Donnell Urges Peace Effort at Lincoln Event

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), speaking at a ceremony here marking the eighty-third anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's assassination, yesterday urged that America continue to work as a force for peace in the world.

Senator Donnell presided at the ceremony, held at the Lincoln Museum, 511 10th st. nw., which formerly was Ford's Theater where the assassination took place.

America, Donnell told those present, should continue to be a "powerful and constructive" force toward achieving that "just and lasting leace, of which Lincoln wrote, among ourselves and all nations."

William E. Leahy, Washington attorney and Lincoln student, related events connected with the Civil War President's assassination and with the flight and capture of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin.

Also on the program was Alfred Heitmuller, 1325 Gallatin st. nw., 99-year-old District resident who, as a boy, saw the Civil War President many times.

Dr. C. Percy Powell of the manuscripts division of the Library of Congress, who catalogued the Robert Todd Lincoln papers, and Dr. Robert Lee Kincaid, president of Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn., also were among the speakers.

R. G. Medlin Dies at 72; Law Graduate in'42

Robert G. Medlin, 72, a retired postoffice employe from Fort Smith, Ark., who received his law degree here at the age of 67, died Saturday at the home of his son, Robert G. Medlin, jr., of Suitland, Md.

A native of Brownsville, Tenn., Mr. Medlin finished two years of study at the University of Arkansas in 1897, and became an employe of the Postoffice Department in Arkansas about 1900. After 33 years' service, Mr. Medlin retired from the Government and took prelaw studies at the University of Arkansas, from 1934 to 1936.

Mr. Medlin became a resident of Washington in 1936, and later entered the Washington College of Law, where his son, Robert G. Medlin, jr., was a student. He received his degree in 1942. Ill health forced him to relinquish a law review course preparatory to taking the examination for admission t othe Washington bar. He had lived with his son at 4325 Royal st., Suitland, Md., for the past three months.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason, member of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of Sigma Nu Psi, a legal fraternity at the Washington College of Law, and member of the Fort Smith, Ark., chapters of the Knights of Pythias and Woodmen of the World.

Mr. Medlin is survived by his three sons, Robert G. Medlin, jr., Will A. Medlin of Arlington, and DeLyle Bronte Medlin of Fairlington.

4 Quit Staff Of Crippled Child Group

A "revolt" by staff workers of the District Society for Crippled Children has resulted in the resignation of four employes, the firing of a fifth person and the adoption of a reorganization plan.

The situation, as learned from both factions yesterday, is this:

The "revolt" of the staff personnel was against the administration of Mrs. Jewell Gaffney, the society's executive director. However, Mrs. Gaffney had the support of a majority of the board of directors.

The workers who have left their jobs are Miss Louise Norris, a physiotherapist; Mrs. Virginia Langford, speech therapist; Miss Edna M. Gilbert, kindergarten teacher; Mrs. Virginia O'Dell, a public health nurse who handled public relations, and Miss Barbara Messick, who had been Mrs. Gaffney's secretary for four years.

What apparently had been a long-smouldering feud broke out when Mrs. Lankford was asked to submit her resignation. According to one board member who supported Mrs. Gaffney in the dispute, Miss Norris threatened there would be a series of resignations if Mrs. Lankford was forced from her job.

Mrs. Beulah Drake, society president, appointed Mrs. C. D. Lowe as chairman of a special investigating committee to hear Miss Norris' complaints.

Miss Norris read the committee a prepared statement and departed without being asked any questions. One committee member suggested immediately that the best remedy would be to fire Miss Norris.

This was done, over the protest of Mrs. Lowe. She was the only dissenter in the decision to fire Miss Norris.

Mrs. Lowe, who is also a director of the National Society for Crippled Children, said she opposed the majority vote because she felt in fairness to Miss Norris both sides of the question should be considered.

The action taken by Miss Norris was followed by the reassignment of Miss Gilbert, Mrs. O'Dell and Miss Messick.

In her letter of resignation, Miss Gilbert said, "Working conditions have become so unpleasant and undesirable, I find it impossible to continue. . . ."

Similar sentiments were voiced by the others who resigned. Mrs. Drake said Mrs. Lankford and Miss Gilbert have both been replaced; two candidates are being considered to succeed to Miss Norris' job; Mrs. O'Dell's job need not be filled until next fall and Miss Messick will be released when she leaves her job May 1.

Democrats Again Scored In Arlington

One one side, the Civil Service Commission pointed out that a $5 filing fee required from persons voting for delegates to the State convention bars Federal employes living in Arlington from taking part in the convention.

Payment of the fee by a Federal employe would be equivalent, the commission pointed out, to becoming a political candidate, which is prohibited by the Hatch Act.

Demands Smith's "Disapproval"

In another action, Arthur F. Souther, chairman of the Americanism Committee of the Sons of the American Revolution, Society of Virginia, demanded in a telegram to Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) that Smith immediately inform the public of his "disapproval of the Arlington County Democratic Committee's plan for selecting State delegates."

The Civil Service Commission statement and Souther's wire followed a letter to the Commission by Smith pointing out that Arlington's Federal employes are prohibited from running for local office on either ticket even though an amendment to the Hatch Act by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) "clearly leaves it within the discretion of your Commission to afford the relief which I am asking."

Smith's letter was released without comment over the weekend by C. Harrison Mann, Arlington County Democratic Committee chairman.

Says CCC Blamed Committee

In his wire to Smith, Souther charged the Commision statement placed responsibility for disenfranchisement of the Arlington Federal worker upon the Arlington committee.

"Unless it is your intention to cover up the Arlington committee's shameful action, you should immediately inform the public of your disapproval of the Arlington convention," the wire concluded.

The county Democratic committee has been previously attacked by Souther and other county Democratic for calling the county convention without previous precinct elections.

ARMCO STEEL CORPORATION

You formerly knew us as The American Rolling Mill Company — or perhaps as just "Armco."

We are now officially known as "Armco Steel Corporation," a change we are sure will be a convenience to everyone who knows us or with whom we do business.

For 34 years the name Armco and the familiar triangle trademark have been widely advertised in popular magazines and in many other ways. It has been labeled on millions of steel products of our manufacturing customers. It came to be far better known than the original company name, which made it logical to use this familiar trade name in our new company name. The new name also clearly identifies us as steel producers.

This change is one of name only. Armco's 47-year program of developing special-purpose steels, its progressive employee relations, and its relations with customers and the general public will not be affected.

Nor will the change in name affect our large national subsidiary which has an office in Washington. It will continue to be known as Armco Drainage & Metal Products, Inc., manufacturers of metal drainage and construction products for use on highways, railroads, airports, and by various industries.

Under our new name, as with the old, we shall continue to serve the best interests of steel buyers and steel product users.

Finale to House Party

Duke of Windsor Does Stint With Drum Sticks For Greenbrier Ball

By Marie McNair

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS W. VA., April 18.—Today guests are bidding the Greenbrier a reluctant farewell. The house party is over, bags are packed and already many are on their way.

There's a lot to remember, nothing to forget of this four days stay at one of the most enchanting spots this side of paradise.

There was a beautiful finale to it all last night at a champagne ball, with West Virginia's Governor, Clarence W. Meadows, present to give the toast to his State; the Duke and Duchess of Windsor among the dancers and Bing Crosby to sing.

MRS. McNAIR

All day today the sun flooded the golf course where the pro-amateur golf tournament got off to the first round of a a two-day tournament. There was luncheon in the breeze swept casino after the teams had teed off and cocktails before dinner in the Old White Club.

The Duke, bronzed from his Florida winter, was on the golf course early, the Duchess joined him later in the day and the two were dinner guests of Robert Young, chairman of the board of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and Mrs. Young before the ball.

In the rose ballroom, with its tremendous crystal chandeliers, robin egg blue and gilt chairs and shell pink walls, the lush days of a lost era had been revived just for the night for the champagne ball.

Ladies trailed gowns of rich brocades and satins with jewels flashing at throats and wrists. As they swept through graceful Viennese waltzes red liveried lackeys passed vin rosee and Meyer Davis kept his band going until the first light of dawn appeared in the skies.

THE Duchess of Windsor danced the first dance with her host, Mr. Young, the Duke's partner was Mrs. Brooks Howe whose place at Locust Valley, Long Island, he has leased for two months.

Looking slimmer than ever the Baltimore girl, who married the former King of England, wore a gown of oyster white satin embroidered about the high necked bodice with crystals and brilliants, the slim skirt draped in a bustle back lined with pale rose satin to match her slippers.

Mrs. Howe's gown was of ivory faille, the fitted bodice and bouffant skirt appliqued with bands of black lace.

Former Senator Burton Wheeler claimed the Duchess for a dance while the Duke danced with Mrs. Robert Young, whose gown of cream satin made with a full skirt was encrusted with jewels.

Proving that he's still a good drummer, the Duke of Windsor provided the highlight of the evening, and caused the Duchess to roar with laughter when Meyer Davis presented him with two sets of drum sticks in memory of an occasion 29 years ago. It was Mrs. H. H. Rogers' dance at the Greenbrier when the Duke, then the handsome boyish Prince of Wales, was visiting in this country, and was guest of honor at the dance. During the evening, he borrowed the drummer's sticks to play.

Before a battery of cameras, he took up the sticks again last night and to a burst of applause kept a rhythmic beat to "How Are Things in Glochomora."

Glimpsed swirling about the floor were Mrs. George Mesta, in starched gray lace studded with rhinestones, with Clark Clifford; Mrs. Mesta's sister, blonde Mrs. George Tyson, wearing white chiffon and five strands of pearls; Mrs. John Jacob Astor 3d, whose bouffant electric blue satin gown had a side drapery banded in rose; lovely Mrs. Charles Amory of Boston in a plaid green and beige taffeta; Mrs. Thompson Biddle in a gown of pale blue; Mrs. Lucille Vanderbilt wearing stiff pale pink with low cut bodice to show her Palm Beach tan.

SNAPSHOTS AT THE SPA: Senator Charles Tobey and Mrs. Loretta Rabenhorst who recently announced their engagement, with eyes only for each other, taking movies of each other—Mrs. Winston Guest, dancing with John "Shipwreck" Kelly in a silver and blue gown, the blouse of silver, the gathered skirt of gold. Lady Hartington, the former Kathleen Kennedy, daughter of our one time Ambassador to Great Britain, looking like a 12-year-old in pale pink tennis dress, a turquoise blue ribbon binding her blond hair!

Schuyler Parsons who deals in antiques, Herbert Pulitzer, who wears red pants, J. Arthur Rank and Serge Obelensky a double for each other, Senator Scott Lucas dancing with Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

The flowering apple tree which grows up right out of the bricks on the Old White terrace and at its feet a ring of flames colored azaleas.

Also the patches of Easter lilies, brilliant yellow jonquils, which spring up in the most unexpected places—in court yards, ringing old trees, and growing rampant on green hillsides.

The vistas of chalk white walls and draperies, turquoise chairs, charteuse sofas and rose settees in the promenade—the delft blue and white draperies, the carved white chairs, maids in mammy costumes, caddies in scarlet jackets—the ideas conceived by decorator Dorothy Draper whose contract also says certain flowers for certain rooms and no foolin'.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Couple Had Assumed Children Would Be Fun; Now They Have Two Youngsters and Find Them Maddeningly Difficult; What's Wrong Here?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am wondering if you can help me understand myself and, in so doing, help me guide my children to a happy life.

My background is good, I've had a year of college, I like to read, I like music, sports, etc., and I am married to a grand husband of similar background.

Our marriage is happy except for the fact that we don't seem to understand our children. We have two, a boy and a girl—one 6 and the other 3 years of age. Except for isolated moments of fun, they seem to drive us almost mad. They are contrary and demanding, which keeps us constantly on the alert to prevent them from getting into dangerous mischief.

Is Modern Life Hard on Nerves?

HAVE we expected too much of our children? They are not at all what we had assumed they would be, and does this explain why we cannot enjoy them as much as we had anticipated? Or is the modern way of life harder on the parent-child relationship than the old-fashioned way?

I feel so cheated in not being completely happy with my children that I want to do better with them; I want to bring them up so they will be better prepared for parenthood and able to find fuller enjoyment in it. In the meantime, I keep working at being a good parent.

We go on trips together and share almost all occasions, such as birthdays, etc., but what is wrong with us or our training that we (my husband and I) find parenthood a desperately difficult task with so little joy. We wouldn't part with our children for anything, but neither would we want any more. What is the answer?

R. S.

'Modern' Attitude Lacks Perspective

DEAR R. S.: It is the "modern" concept of marriage as entertained by immature minds, rather than life in the midst of contemporary developments, that causes almost intolerable strain in many young couples as the encompassing responsibilities of parenthood begin to accrue.

In the "old fashioned" era, marriage was synonymous with settling down and putting the things of youth behind. It marked the end of one way of life, the beginning of another; and it was understood that responsibility, chiefly centered on industriously subsidized family production, was to be the leitmotif of the new.

In general, in those days, the dominant purpose of all married activity was to secure and furbish a home to be proud of, as sanctuary for children, stronghold for age and as the theater of one's social life, where friendships might be developed meaningfully.

But nowadays marriage is more often visualized and ventured as a tentative, purely personal relationship between two persons "in love," who are gambling that marriage for them will be at least as much (maybe more) fun—accent on fun—as being single.

And as for home, for such as the above, it is one's "address," one's current domestic headquarters (owned or leased), where one's goods and children, if any, are lodged; and which for the married pair becomes prison walls if they can't break away from it frequently with ease.

Mother Vibrates With Resentment

YOUR distrait attitude toward parenthood puts you in this category. Although you say, "Our marriage is happy except for the fact we don't seem to understand our children," I think that to honestly mirror the truth of your feelings you should have written, "Our marriage would be fun if it weren't for the fact that we have children."

On the unconscious level, you are screechy with resentment of parenthood, an assignment you reject emotionally because of the unremitting cares it presents, from which you see no escape for the next 20 years and it is this unconscious attitude of yours which makes the relationship so difficult for all concerned.

The children can't relax around you and enjoy themselves in quiet ways because you, for the most part, aren't relaxed with (or about) them. They are altogether affected by your tension and reflect it back at the same sharp pitch, in all aspects of personal expressiveness. Thus at present the mother-child relationship is a vicious circle of mutual ill will, with even your husband affected by the hostile vibrations—and only you can break the spell.

To get a saving slant on yourself, read "Modern Woman: The Lost Sex," by Ferdinand Lundberg and Dr. Marynia Farnham. (Harper & Brothers, publishers).

M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Ask Anne — Where Are the Auction Sales?

When we were living in Ohio, a hobby of ours was attending country auctions which were advertised in daily newspapers. Since moving to Washington, over a year ago, we have heard of no such auctions. Where can we find out when and where such country auctions take place? We would be willing to travel any reasonable distance to attend one. F. L. C.

Checking rural newspapers from nearby Maryland and Virginia seems to be your best method of hearing about auctions. I am told that the newspaper files at the Library of Congress have current copies of a few rural weeklies. A check of these might turn up some auctions near enough for you to visit. Or, if you are sufficiently interested, you might subscribe to a weekly in a neighboring county where many such auctions are held. Any other suggestions, readers?

We are going to purchase a wringer-type washing machine next week, and would appreciate you telling us the best method of disinfecting such articles as dish towels, bath towels, handkerchiefs, etc. I have heard some women say they pour bleach in the water (never measuring the amount), but I thought bleach might fade colored borders of towels and that it was hard on clothes. Are there any other helpful hints that I should have in regard to how long clothes should be washed, how much suds to use, how many rinses, and also any information about bluing and starching in the tub? R. H. S.

If you will use a household bleach in the proportion of one tablespoon bleach to each gallon of water in the washer, the clothes will be disinfected and whitened. In the average 16-gallon washer this would be a cup of bleach to a washer-full of water. This amount, if thoroughly washed out, will not fade fast-color borders in towels, but will, instead, brighten the colors by removing any grayness or yellowing which might be present. Bleach does not weaken the fabric in the clothes if it is used in the above proportion and is then thoroughly rinsed out.

The best advice which can be given in regard to time of washing, etc., is to read completely, and follow exactly, the directions which come with your particular make of machine. As to bluing and starching in the tub, how you do it seems largely a matter of personal preference. The sort of bluing which comes in flakes and is added to the washing water is very easy to use. If combined with the water before any clothes are added, it never streaks the clothes. If you starch clothes after the last rinse (rather than add starch to the last rinse of water), you can better regulate the amount of starch applied to various articles and parts of articles, such as the collars and cuffs.

Can I refinish the top of an inexpensive maple-finished coffee table without doing the legs or sides? The wood is probably birch, finished in reddish stain. What is the easiest and quickest way? V. J. B.

One quick, easy way to refurbish this table would be to dull and smooth the present finish by sanding with a fine grade of sandpaper and then apply two coats of maple varnish stain over the entire table. If you attempted to refinish only the top, it would be difficult to apply a stain to it which would exactly match the sides and legs.

I have a lovely mandarin coat which was sent to me from China about a year ago. The silver thread used in the embroidery has tarnished in many places. Can you tell me how to restore this silver without harming or staining the white silk beneath? G. B. S.

The most you can do at home, with safety, to remove the tarnish from the silver thread is to dust the embroidery with powdered alum, allow to stand 15 or 20 minutes and then brush away. If this removes some of the tarnish, but not all, repeat. Perhaps wrapping the coat in the cloths especially treated to prevent tarnish will prevent future tarnishing. These can be purchased in department stores where silver polish is sold.

I have a leather ottoman which came from Morocco years ago and I am anxious to have it repaired, or to have a new cover made for the loose cushion inside. The cover is removable, being laced on at the bottom. J. P. L.

Is there any way I can repair a polished aluminum singing tea kettle which has developed several pinholes around the edges of the bottom? I have tried solder, but it does not hold. A. B. G.

Your best chance of restoring this tea kettle to usefulness would be to have it soldered by a professional. For a firm with equipment to do such work, look under "Roofers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book. Radio repairmen also have the equipment needed for soldering and an accommodating one in your neighborhood might fix it for you.

The mirror of my compact is broken. Where can I have the mirror replaced? M. W.

USED FATS!

Every penny counts in these days of high food costs. Every drop of used fat counts, too . . . in this shortage of fats and oils that the government says is so serious. See how much more fat you can salvage by melting down meat trimmings, skimming gravies, really scraping pans. Re-use it for cooking, of course, but even after that, there's always some left. Save all used fats. Then . . .

Abandoned Roads, Bridges Are Not Wasted in Virginia

Richmond, Va., April 18 (Spl.). When a new highway is constructed, what happens to the abandoned roadway? The answer, according to the Virginia State Highway Department, is "salvage."

The department said today that abandoned bridges are used again on roads of lesser importance. Steel spans are dismantled and stored for future use and wooden flooring is preserved to refloor smaller bridges.

Often one large bridge will provide the material and spans for three or four small structures. In some instances five small spans may be combined to make one long bridge.

Abandoned right-of-way is used for scenic turnouts, where traffic can pull off the main route to admire a Virginia scenic vista, or it may become a picnic wayside area.

Beetle Control Parley Planned

Manassas, Va., April 18 (Spl.).—Representatives of Prince William, Fairfax and Loudoun County boards of supervisors and agricultural agents from those counties met in Richmond with State officials this week to discuss Japanese beetle control.

The State Agriculture Department agreed to distribute 200 pounds of spore dust, but emphasized that beetle control will mainly be the responsibility of individual landowners.

He resigned as town attorney and as attorney for the Southside Electric Cooperative, a Rural Electrification Administration project, to enter the Navy in February, 1942. Ohio Flood Peril Passes; River Falls

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP).—The danger of a major Ohio River flood appeared over today, as the rain-swollen stream crested here.

Lowland residents upstream in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio already were moving back into their homes as the river and its tributaries fell rapidly.

The Ohio crested at 64.8 feet—nearly 13 feet above flood stage—here at 7 a. m. Forecasters said it would be below flood stage here and in Kentucky and Indiana by Friday.

Hagerstown Man Killed in Crash

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 18 (AP).—Ernest Clayton Mundey, 21, of Hagerstown, Md., was killed and two companions in a car which overturned near here today were hurt seriously, the West Virginia State Police said.

Frank Edward Fair, 19, driver of the car, and Robert Stevens, 20, were reported in fair condition at the Martinsburg City Hospital. Fair crawled from the car and summoned help.

Shenandoah Has Baby Chick Boom

Richmond, Va., April 18 (AP).—More baby chicks were sold in the Shenandoah Valley early this month than at any time since the end of the war, the Virginia State Poultry Federation has reported.

Secretary R. Frank Frazier explained that small placements of chicks last December caused a broiler shortage in March.

As a result, recent income to broiler producers has been the best in many months and they have been encouraged to expand production. Weekly chick placements had reached 684,000 by the end of March—an increase of 30 per cent above the same date a year earlier.

Pianist Gives Recital in New Setting

By Paul Hume

The Folger Shakespeare Library was host last night to a piano recital by Helen Haupt.

We hope that this first concert we have heard in that beautiful setting will be followed by many more. It is an ideal theater for music as well as stage works and proves an invaluable addition to Washington's present concert halls.

Miss Haupt chose her program wisely as to repertoire and technical matters. She opened with an unfamiliar sonata of Haydn (what Haydn sonata can be called familiar?) and followed it with Schubert's A minor work in the same form. Igor Stravinsky has said, "It is not easy to conceive how a pianist could establish his reputation by taking Haydn as his war-horse. That is undoubtedly the reason why that great musician has not won a renown among our interpreters that is in keeping with his true worth."

Helen Haupt casts her lot with other intelligent artists by choosing to explore a repertoire designed to bring fine music to the public without regard to its immediate popularity. Her phrasing in both sonatas was well conceived except in her habit of interrupting the flow of melody at climactic moments to give an unnecessary stress.

Preludes of Rachmaninoff and Shostakovich followed the intermission with Miss Haupt playing these in fine, crisp style. Her best performance of the evening came in Kent Kennan's well-contrived sonatina, a work which reminds us strongly of Hindemith.

Two Schubert Impromptus for encores returned the artist to a composer whom she obviously reveres. If Miss Haupt can achieve greater sonority without damaging her naturally fine tone, she will broaden her present scope.

District to Join Celebrations Of Skyway Opening Saturday

Washington, Los Angeles and points between will celebrate on Saturday the opening of Skyway No. 1, designated by the Civil Aeronautics Administration as a cross-country route for private fliers.

Here at its Eastern terminus, the air route will be opened with a luncheon at the National Airport and an aerial display by Navy planes.

The first marked route for personal pilots spanning the continent, the "air turnpike," will be officially named "the Wright Way" at ceremonies that day in Dayton, Ohio, home town of the late Orville and Wilbur Wright, aeronautical pioneers.

Private fliers from the eastern section of the United States have been invited to fly here to participate in the luncheon, it was announced by Jesse M. Hadley, aviation committe chairman of the Washington Board of Trade which sponsored the route with the Los Angles Chamber of Commerce. Prizes will be awarded the pilot flying the greatest distance and to the oldest and youngest male and female aviators flying to Washington for the dedication.

Lauren Bacall Draws Suspension Penalty

Hollywood, April 18 (U.P.).—Lauren Bacall, wife and frequent screen leading lady of Humphrey Bogart, has been suspended for refusal to accept an acting assignment, Warner Bros. Studio announced today.

The studio said Miss Bacall refused to appear in "A Girl From Jones Beach," because it called for her to wear a bathing suit.

Soviet Chess Champion Loses to U. S. Player

London, April 18 (U.P.).—Moscow radio announced today that Samuel Reshevsky of the United States defeated Mikhail Botvinnik of the Soviet Union in the world chess championship.

The broadcast said the American's victory was an upset. The Soviet champion, Botvinnik, had not lost a game until today. The broadcast said Botvinnik wasted a great amount of time getting out of a trap set by Reshevsky and, suffering from the time shortage, made a mistake and lost.

Botvinnik still leads the tournament with 8 points out of 11 games. Paul Keres of Russia and Reshevsky are tied with 5½ points out of 10 games. Reshevsky will play Kere tomorrow.

Facing the Facts With Junior

"Bad old floor, hitting Sammy on the head. I'll spank it." Or, "It's a nasty rug to trip baby and make her fall down."

Such words are meant to comfort a child who has had an accident and is distressed by his fall or his bump. And perhaps they do. But there is one thing that we should recognize about this approach. We are not helping the child to understand how to avoid future mishaps. We are not giving him the chance he should have to learn to be responsible to gather in the beginnings of understanding cause-and-effect relationships.

He may very well get the idea that his hurt came not from anything he did, but because of the "badness" of some lifeless object. Far better a procedure is to help him see how he may avoid a similar accident in the future. Teach him not to run too fast over the floor or to lift his feet when he comes to a rug so that he does not trip over it.

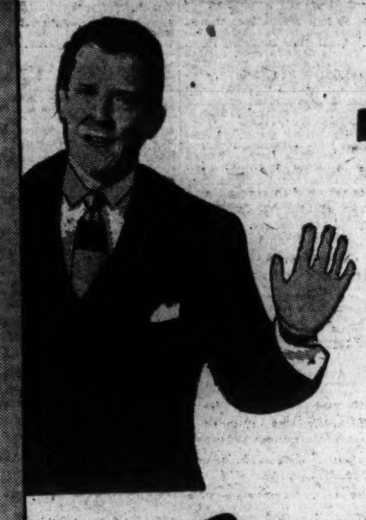
When you say "COME BACK AGAIN" It costs your carrier time and money



YOUR Washington Post carrier has to pay for the papers he's delivered whether he collects from you or not. So when you ask him to "come back later" because you're not prepared for his visit, it's money out of his pocket to meet his bill and time out of his day to call on you again.

If you work for a salary you expect to be paid the first time you see the paymaster on payday. If you run a business you expect your customers to send in their checks for your services promptly. You have expenses of your own and it takes money to meet them. Just so, your carrier depends on payment from you to take care of his expenses.

When you fail him on collection night it may mean a sacrifice of money he needs for immediate personal, home or school purposes. If you ask him to return later he's wasted the time that it took to visit you—and a carrier's life is a busy one. He has a seven-day-a-week early morning job in addition to going to school, doing his homework and joining in outside activities.

Be fair with your carrier. Pay him on time. And if you're moving, notify him in advance. Papers delivered after you've moved do you no good, and your carrier has to pay for them. If you don't see the boy, call NA. 4200 and tell Circulation.

Your carrier will thank you for your cooperation by giving you the best of service.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Love Conquers All, Restores Gold's Glitter

Alfred Love of 1242 Mount Vernon blvd., Alexandria, Va., is a station mechanic at Pan American Airways.

He was on the field at the airport over the weekend, tending to his chores as Belgium's Prince Regent took off for home.

With the Prince safely on his way, Al's eye fell on a bit of glittering metal lying on the ground. He picked it up, and found that (in this case, at least) that which glittered was Gold's.

It was my missing college class key, receipt of which is hereby gratefully acknowledged.

PLAY BALL!

The return of spring is now official, and the baseball teams square away for their annual pennant scrambles.

So it's once again time for me to match my predictions against those of Jim Wessel, Associated Press sportswriter who has been trying to convince me for 20 years that his crystal ball is more accurate than mine.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
Jim	Bill
Yanks	Yanks
Red Sox	Red Sox
Tigers	Indians
Indians	Athletics
Athletics	Tigers
White Sox	Nats
Nats	White Sox
Browns	Browns
NATIONAL LEAGUE
Braves	Braves
Dodgers	Cards
Cards	Reds
Reds	Dodgers
Giants	Giants
Pirates	Phils
Phils	Pirates
Cubs	Cubs

My dark horse in the American League is the Cleveland entry, which could "catch fire" and take it all.

In the National, look out for the Cincinnati Redlegs, who finally have some big league ball players on their roster.

SURPRISE!

I've gotten several reports about the motorman on the Cabin John line who helps his passengers by calling out all stops, transfer points, and other vital information on his run.

From the clews furnished, the gentleman appears to be C. P. Edwards of 126 Kentucky ave. se., who wears badge No. 2028.

Capital Transit officials tell me that they try to encourage their operators to call out all stops and transfer points.

This news comes as something of a surprise to me, and I've been giving Capital Transit practically all of my streetcar business for quite a number of years.

MISCELLANY

The school kids of today are keener internationalists than the statesmen of two decades ago. The second grade class at Chevy Chase Elementary School worked during Easter vacation to raise money for postage on food packages for foreign lands. Then, last week, the second-graders sponsored a white elephant sale that raised $47.36 for their private ERP. (Excuse me; it's ECA now) . . . Lee Griffin (Taylor 6472) tells me that his hardball team is looking for a sponsor so that it can get into league competition. The players range up to 17 years of age . . . Auxiliary 386 of the Jewish War Veterans will hold a Spring Fashion Show at Henderson Castle, 8:15 tonight, with the proceeds to be used in veterans' hospitals . . . Mrs. Lore W. Schrider of 802 Philadelphia ave., Silver Spring, Md., confesses that she and her 5-year-old son love to eat bacon grease sandwiches . . . University of New Hampshire Alumni Clubbers can make reservations for Thursday's Founders' Day Banquet (8 p. m., Continental Hotel) by calling Ken Lovell at Glebe 4696 . . . Shirley Povich, back from Florida bronzed and full of tall tales about his golf scores, will be my guest on WINX at noon today, to tell my listeners how the Nats stack up against the rest of the league. I limit my invitations to married men, on the theory that their wives will listen in and thereby double my audience.

EXPLANATION

The current issue of Life magazine carries a picture of ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman inspecting his unfurnished quarters in the Maiatico building at Connecticut ave. and H st. nw.

Life readers have been pestering me to explain the building's unusual name, so I've finally been driven to do a little work on the matter.

'TWAS EVER THUS

When we got Saturday's story about the White House being considered a firetrap, one of our office wits mused:

"The housing situation is worse than we thought. The place is a firetrap, yet a dozen men are trying desperately to move in, and the present tenant doesn't want to leave."

Listen to Bill Gold each noon. Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

NEW YORK.—Bartley Crum, who is negotiating with Marshall Field for the purchase of PM, once was questioned by Molotov about American journalism. "Tell me," said Molotov, "what position does Mr. Hearst occupy in the Government?" . . . "None at all," replied Crum. "Mr. Hearst publishes newspapers in many cities. He writes what he pleases. He has no connection with the Government" . . . Molotov looked at him skeptically. "And furthermore," Crum continued, "Mr. Stalin or you can get on the front of Mr. Hearst's papers, Colonel McCormick's paper in Chicago and Cissy Patterson's paper in Washington whenever you say or do something noteworthy. That's more than any of your Russian newspapers would do about American politicians" . . . Molotov shook his head and said: "Mr. Crum, I can see you are naive about journalism."

A Soviet attache named Demshenko invited Crum to meet Andrei Gromyko. "I don't want to meet Gromyko," said Crum. "He's a sour-puss" . . . "What does that mean, sour-puss?" asked Demshenko . "Gromyko never smiles," said Crum . . . "You are mistaken," Demshenko insisted. "Mr. Gromyko does smile" . . . "No. He's a sour-puss," said Crum . . . The next morning a Russian courier accompanied Demshenko to Crum's office. The courier carried a large album. He opened it to a page which had a photo of Gromyko smiling. "See?" said Demshenko. "He smiles."

Freeman Hammond, a radio actor, heard that a pearl company was planning to sponsor a television show, and he applied for a job. The producer of the show told him: "What we're looking for is an actor to portray an oyster," Hammond waited, while the producer conferred with the agents representing the company . . . "Sorry," the producer reported, "but you're not the type."

Gene Arnold, a young painter, found that painting wasn't lucrative enough. He turned to nightclub work and became a comedian. He recently appeared at the Bal Tabarin, where he worked for eight weeks. During his engagement he received no billing on the poster outside the club entrance. The poster listed the acts in the previous show. When Arnold's engagement was over, he got the job of painting the poster for the incoming show. He painted the names of the acts, and proudly added his own.

Truman Decisions Hurt Palestine

By Drew Pearson

When Jimmie Byrnes was attending the Paris Peace Conference in October, 1946, President Truman phoned him that he had just made a statement proposing the admission of 100,000 Jewish refugees into Palestine.

Byrnes

He had learned, the President informed his Secretary of State, that Governor Dewey was going to make a similar refugee proposal on the eve of a Jewish holiday so he had decided to beat Dewey to it.

A few minutes later Foreign Secretary Bevin came into Byrnes' hotel room, greatly upset. He wanted to know why the United States was proposing a policy of vital import to a British-mandated country without first consulting the British government. Byrnes explained the circumstances.

"It's unfortunate," observed Bevin, "that you have to have your foreign policy run from New York.

"By the way," he asked, "do you have any more elections in New York soon?"

Palestine Tragedy

After months of discussion, after two international commissions had gone to Palestine to study the problem, and after the United Nations had held prolonged debate, their final decision was reversed by President Truman in less than one hour.

Three days before he reversed the partition of Palestine, he told visiting Senators that under no circumstances would the U. N.'s decision be changed. One day before the reversal he told a prominent Jewish leader there would be no reversal.

Yet the next day, Secretary of Defense Forrestal called at the White House, played up to the President's ego, told him he was too big a man to be swayed by politics, and overnight the United Nations was told that the United States held the last word on the partition of Palestine.

Inside the KKK

Minutes of the Ku Klux Klan—Klavern No. 1, Atlanta, April 12—Klansman Autry, co-owner of the Autry-Loundes Funeral Home, launched vigorous attack on Drew Pearson for announcing that the Klan would burn a cross at Augusta. All Klansmen were urged to catch Pearson's spy.

"I will be glad to bury the rat free of charge, courtesy of the Autry-Loundes Funeral Home," offered Autry.

Grand Dragon Green bemoaned the fact that for the second successive week there were no applicants for reinstatement or new membership in Klavern No. 1, despite the fact that he had just launched a membership drive.

"This is a hell of a way to start a membreship drive," complained the Grand Dragon. He said he felt safe in announcing the details of the Augusta cross-burning since it was now Monday and too late for Pearson to get it in his Sunday broadcast. He proceeded to give out detailed instructions for Klansmen to meet on the road outside of Augusta.

End of the Cavalry

Most Senators who heard the debate between Oklahoma's speculating Senator Elmer Thomas and Oregon's forthright Wayne Morse regarding Army remount stations didn't have any inkling of what was behind it.

For more than a year, the Army, having given up cavalry, has wanted to turn its remount stations over to the Agriculture Department to be used for farm horse breeding. But Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, former chairman of the Agriculture Committee, has said no. He has especially opposed transfer of the Army's remount station at El Reno, Okla., to the Agriculture Department.

Significantly just before the vote on this bill last year, Thomas asked Secretary of Agriculture Anderson for a letter stating that neither he nor his wife had speculated on the cotton market. Thomas said he wanted to be able to use the letter to deny a statement about his cotton speculating published in this column.

Anderson, however, replied that he could not truthfully write such a letter, and refused. Whereupon Thomas blocked Anderson's department from getting the El Reno Remount Station.

This year, the bill came up again. This time, Senator Morse was pushing the bill. Morse happens to be not only the Senate's most expert horseman, but also has introduced a bill requiring all Senators to register their stock and commodity market transactions.

So when the Army remount bill came up for a vote the other day, Thomas of Oklahoma tried to block it. By this time he may have had another reason for saying no. Oil is reported to exist under El Reno's 8000 acres and the oil companies have wanted the station sold to private bidders.

In the debates, however, Senator Thomas never mentioned oil. Nor did he mention his gripe at Morse for having introduced the bill requiring all Senators to register their stock and commodity deals. But he did his best to defeat the bill just the same.

However, Senator Taft stuck with Morse. He let the bill come to a vote. It passed by a comfortable margin.
